Cleric Accuses Odom, Walks Out of Inquest Into Weiss Death.

Statement Stirs War of Factions

By the United Press.

Baton Rouge, La., Sept. 16.—Foes and friends of Huey P. Long declared war on each other in open court today.

His right hand still in the air from taking an oath to tell the truth at the inquest into the death of Long's assassin, the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, organizer of the share-the-wealth clubs, charged there was a plot to murder Long and that District Attorney John Fred Odom, of East Baton Rouge Parish, was one of the plotters.

Smith then strode from the room, applause rattling in his ears, because he had refused to give any testimony so long as Odom sat in court and asked the questions.

No man lifted a hand to stop him, and two hours later the inquest was adjourned with the announcement by Odom that none of Long's bodyguards would be arrested on charges of having killed Dr. Carl A. Weiss, jr., 30 seconds after he had sent a bullet into the Senator's abdomen.

War Declared.

Officially the deaths of Long and Weiss are closed incidents here, but the war that Smith declared from the witness chair today will flame for months from the Arkansas line to the Delta.

There have been rumors and whispers on street corners that some day this would happen; some day when the mourning was over that polite phrases would be put to one side, and grim unyielding conflict would be the order of the day. Today it happened in a hot, steaming courtroom when Smith, a minister in the Christian Church, was called to the witness chair. He was wearing a dark blue suit and a black tie, still in mourning for Long. Smith got to the witness chair, but never sat down in it.

After the oath was administered to him by Coroner Thomas Bird, Smith glared at Odom, 15 feet away, and then whirled and faced the coroner. His voice, trained and developed in a hundred pulpits, vibrated like that of an evangelist, harrying the consciences of backsliders in the Bayous.

Hurls Accusation.

"Mr. Coroner, I wish to make a statement," Smith said. "I respect you and your court, but I accuse the district attorney here present of being a co-plotter in the conspiracy to assassinate Huey Long.

"I don't respect him and I refuse to answer any questions that he may put to me. I shall be glad to answer such questions as you may put to me, but before the district attorney I refuse to testify. I worship my hero and I will do nothing to harass the boys who tried to defend him so heroically."

Odom is a tall, heavy set man who wears steel-rimmed glasses. He was smoking a cigarette when

Franklin Hoyt Named to Head Liquor Control

Republican Is Chosen by Roosevelt; Served N.Y. Bench 25 Years.

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 16.—President Roosevelt today selected Franklin C. Hoyt, of New Hamburg, N. Y., to head the new bureau in the Treasury for Federal control of alcohol.

Hoyt, a judge in New York City for 25 years, called at the home of the President today with Joseph B. Choate, the retiring head of the old Federal Alcohol Control Administration, which was eliminated following the Supreme Court ruling against the NRA.

Harris Willingham, assistant to Choate, also was present, and it is expected he will continue to serve with Judge Hoyt.

Backed Children's Court.

Hoyt, who is a grandson of Salmon P. Chase, the Secretary of the Treasury in the Cabinet of President Lincoln, was the winner of the Hearst temperance contest in 1929 with an award of $25,000.

He also sponsored the New York State constitutional amendment authorizing a children's court and served on the bench of this court.

Hoyt is a Republican, as is Choate. For 19 years he served as judge of the Court of Special Sessions in New York City.

For some time the old Federal Alcohol Control Administration has been without power over the beer, wine and liquor trade it formerly ruled. It worked through codes, which were swept away in the decision that smashed NRA.

16,000 Licenses Granted.

The new FAA (Federal Alcohol Administration) will have power to fine offenders, as well as revoke or suspend licenses, whereas the old agency had no power to assess fines. Instead of working through code authorities, the new FAA will enforce its rules by direct action against violators.

In the period in which it ruled the industry, the FACA licensed about 16,000 manufacturers and wholesalers through its six code authorities. It approved about 10,000 of the 29,538 labels submitted to it by these dealers. "Limited ap-

U. S. Scores In First Test Of Coal Act

Holding Measure Fought By John W. Davis in Baltimore Court.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

With New Deal measures again moving under the judicial spotlight, the Government yesterday turned back the first test suit of the Guffey-Snyder coal stabilization act, was confronted with similar action directed against the public utility holding company act and undertook to defend the validity of the new AAA amendments.

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, in the District of Columbia Supreme Court, dismissed a petition for a temporary injunction restraining enforcement of the coal act on the ground that the suit had been brought prematurely. His action left the way open for a test of the act's validity when the legislation is made effective.

Meanwhile, in the Baltimore Federal district court, John W. Davis, as counsel for trustees of the American States Public Service Co., challenged the constitutionality of the Rayburn-Wheeler act, which places utility holding companies under Federal supervision and, in some instances after January 1, 1938, outlaws such corporate organizations.

AAA Also Challenged.

This suit marked the first attack on the utility holding company legislation, which was fought so bitterly in the last session of Congress. The American States Public Service Co., now going through a reorganization under the bankruptcy act, controls operating companies in several Western States but has its main offices in Baltimore.

In the same Federal court, the Associated Press reported, arguments were commenced before Judge W. Calvin Chesnut against the validity of the amended AAA, with former Senator G. Wharton Pepper leading the attack as counsel for the meat packing firm of John A. Gebelein & Co., Inc., of Baltimore.

Judge Chesnut previously had held the original AAA unconstitutional, as had the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals at Boston. Since then Congress amended the original act by specifying the rates of processing taxes and making further efforts to meet the Boston court's objections to delegation of authority to the Secretary of Agriculture.

Coal Fight Significant.

Pepper, however, contended that the amendments failed to correct the legal defects in the AAA structure and that the act remained class legislation repugnant to the Constitution. He also assailed the new provision which outlaws suits by processors who have possed the tax on to consumers, contending the law is so drawn that complainants cannot prove the levies have not been passed on.

Of these three court actions directed at New Deal measures, that seeking to block administration of the Guffey-Snyder coal act was regarded as both the most interesting and significant, first because it sought to strike down a statute rushed to enactment—partly to avert a general bituminous coal strike, and, secondly, because of its legal and political ramifications.

The suit was brought by James Walter Carter, president of the Carter Coal Co. In addition to seeking

German Balloon Down In International Race

Warsaw, Sept. 16 (AP).—The first balloon was down today in the twenty-third Gordon Bennett international balloon race.

It was the German bag, Deutschland, which landed near Riga, Latvia, about 600 kilometers from Warsaw, at 1:55 p. m.

Earlier in the afternoon, race officials said they assumed all entries must have crossed, or nearly so, the Russo-Polish border, but feared some of them might be blown back again on account of shifting winds.

At 11 a. m. at white balloon, either American or Polish, had been sighted over Smolensk, Russia.

War Question Is Discussed By Roosevelt

No Intervention in Italo-Ethiopian Dispute Planned by U. S.

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 16.—President Roosevelt discussed the possibility of further naval limitations over the tea cups today with Norman Davis, American representative to the preliminary negotiations. Davis afterward expressed doubt of new agreements.

With the British fleet steaming into the Mediterranean in the Italian-Ethiopian crisis, Mr. Roosevelt leisurely talked over the situation with Davis and Mrs. Davis at tea.

Davis, upon his return to the temporary executive office at the Nelson House in Poughkeepsie, said that the foreign situation was discussed just like any other exciting news of the day, but that there was no thought of American intervention.

No Intervention by U. S.

So far as the foreign situation is concerned, Mr. Davis said the British have taken the initiative.

He said there was no indication of American involvement and spoke discouragingly of the possibility of future naval limitations which he has been seeking as this country's representative.

The naval treaties of Washington and London prescribing ratios among the United States, Great Britain and Japan expire next year.

As for the Kellogg Peace Pact, Davis said it provided moral obligation on the part of this Government to help prevent war and this is being done.

As for action by the United States in the event of hostilities he emphasied this was not implied by the treaty.

Describing his talk with the President as principally social, Davis said he did not think there was much possibility of new naval limitations agreements while the threat of war is on.

He did express the hope of some early talk with the British with a view to naval limitations.

Slayer Opens Fire On Posse in Chase

Fugitive Escapes in Woods After Wounding Man.

By the Associated Press.

Hadley, Mass., Sept. 16.—John Bey, 37, desperate Connecticut fugitive, remained at large tonight as posses continued a three-day pursuit over a large wooded area.

Bey, wanted for slaying a constable, was last seen early today as he disappeared in the woods at South Amherst, shortly after he had fired on three State troopers. Although the troopers emptied their pistols at him, Bey took careful aim with a rifle and returned the fire, slightly wounding Trooper Edward Sivik in the arm.

The theory was held tonight that Bey remained within a radius of six miles of the scene of this morning's shooting.

Approximately 60 troopers and other officers were concentrated in the region. Patrol cars bristling with rifles and machine guns moved the officers quickly from one section to another.

Three bloodhounds and two police dogs worked with the posses.

Anglo-French Move for 'Collaboration' Pact Seen Under Way.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Sept. 16. — Certain League of Nations members, seeking a way to keep Mussolini from war, were reported from reliable sources tonight to have gone to work on a preliminary plan for a "protective" economic boycott of Italy if she should launch unprovoked hostilities in Ethiopia.

The disclosure came as the League Assembly concluded a general debate marked by repeated expressions of fidelity to the League Covenant and climaxed by a diplomatic brush between Soviet Russia and Poland during which the Polish delegates walked out on a speech by Maxim Litvinoff, the Russian foreign commissar.

Those who professed to be close to the boycott conversations insisted that this "protective boycott" could not be considered tantamount to an economic blockade.

They explained that the word "blockade" immediately conjures up the use of warships to enforce it. Employment of warships, it was explained, might eventually be necessary, but for the moment the fundamental idea is a self-denying ordinance whereby League states would pledge themselves to have no economic relations with Italy.

[The United Press, in a copyrighted dispatch from Geneva, reported secret negotiations between French and British statesmen "envisage general collaboration, including naval."—Editor's note.]

May Close Borders.

For those states which have no direct trade with Italy, the scheme, if it develops, might eventually take the form of a pledge to prohibit transportation of goods across their territories which are destined for Italy.

The British delegation, asked this evening about the boycott reports, authorized the following statement:

"The British and French governments have had from time to time conversations concerning what action might be pursued in the event of certain things happening. But the British government has made no definite proposals."

The powers in general, a British spokesman added, have been thinking about the future and there has been a general discussion of what might be done. However, no concrete plans have been arranged, he said.

It was remarked in league circles that a general boycott against Italy might in the long run prove most embarrassing for that country because of Italy's need to obtain raw materials from abroad.

Diplomats close to the situation said, however, that Great Britain wants to keep the British fleet out of any possible League measures as long as possible and to limit collective League action to a trade boycott.

Answers Hitler.

The punitive article of the League Covenant says that if any League member resorts to war in disregard of its League obligations, it shall be deemed to have committed an act of war against all members of the League.

The members then would undertake immediately to subject it to severance of all trade and financial relations. Further, League members are agreed mutually to support each other in any financial or economic measures undertaken.

Three small nations — Panama, Haiti and the Irish Free State—through their representatives pleaded for peace through the League Covenant before the diplomatic clash occurred between Litvinoff and Joseph Beck, Poland's foreign minister.

The Lithuanian foreign minister, Stasys Lozoraitis, also took occasion to retort to Adolf Hitler's Reichstag speech of last night on the Memel question.

Declaring Lithuania was "ready to proceed at all times to a loyal

Aluminum Suit For 9 Millions Lost by Baush

U. S. Appeals Court Gives Defendant Verdict in 7-Year-Old Fight.

By the United Press.

New York, Sept. 16.—The Federal Court of Appeals late today rendered judgment for the Auminum Co. of America in the $9,000,000 anti-trust legislation brought by the Baush Machine Tool Co., of Springfield, Mass. The case has been in the courts more than seven years.

On June 6 the Aluminum Co. appealed to the New York court for a retrial after a Hartford decision in the United States District Court of Connecticut March 9 had awarded the Baush Co. $3,169,000 damages.

William Watson Smith, chief counsel for the Aluminum Co., claimed the defendant did not receive a fair trial at Hartford due to erroneous and prejudicial rulings of Judge Harland B. Howe. He said the Baush Co. primarily was in the "law suit business" seeking to make more money under the anti-trust law than in aluminum.

The Baush Co. charged the Aluminum Co. with restraining competition through agreement with foreign producers and fixing the price of aluminum ingot too high.

The Hartford verdict marked the third suit of the company against the aluminum concern. The original suit was brought in Boston in 1928 and later dropped by the plaintiff.

The second suit, for $3,000,000 damages, trebled to $9,000,000 under the anti-trust laws, was brought in 1931 in New Haven.

Lasting three months, the suit was the longest in the civil record of the United States District Court. A verdict was awarded the Aluminum Co., but a retrial was ordered by the Circuit Court of Appeals, which resulted in a reverse verdict for the Baush Co.

Hitler, Amid Cheers, Predicts Certain Doom of Democracy

Reich's Military Strength Is Paraded As Nazis Close Nurnberg Convention; Foreign Observers See Display.

By the Associated Press.

Nurnberg, Sept. 16.—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler impliedly predicted doom of democracy in a rousing address tonight at the closing session of the Nazi Party convention.

Thousands of Der Fuehrer's followers, who witnessed today for the first time since Germany broke with the Versailles Treaty an exhibition of the nation's new military prowess, cheered his statements.

"If other states have not yet decayed," Hitler told his listeners, "the fact that they rest on democracy does not prove our authority and principle are wrong, but rather that historical processes take time."

Wild applause greeted this assertion.

"Not economists, nor business leaders, nor professors, nor thinkers, nor artists saved Germany," he said, "but exclusively the political soldiery of our party."

Hitler announced the supremacy of the party over state officialdom, saying, "Our party must make corrections if the state apparatus does not function in accordance with party principles," and demanded unquestioning obedience from all Germans to the Nazi Party's decisions.

During the elaborate military show of the day every category of war weapon and every type of military formation the country possesses joined in the demonstration. Ultra-modern tri-motored bombing planes roared overhead, while below some 150 two-men tanks made civilian Germans gape.

Motorized machine guns made the air reverberate as they got into action in mimic warfare.

Army, navy and air attaches of many nations fastened on field glasses as they took in the spectacle. They noted with special interest the emphasis on motorization.

The grandstand was crowded as it had not been during the convention week. Every reference to Germany's remilitarization has been greeted by rousing "heils."

Demands to see the armed forces perform were so great that the same exhibition had to be given twice, in the morning and after lunch. The afternoon performance

Relief Comes Too Late.

New York, Sept. 16 (AP).—A home relief agent went today to the home of Edward Geisenhainer, 42, to see if he needed any help from the city. At the door he met Deputy City Marshal Benjamin Horn with a dispossess notice. They were both too late. Geisenhainer was dead, hanging from the transom in the kitchen.

Famed as Belle, Suzanne Adams Dies in Capital

Widow, 74, Had Reigned at Balls in St. Louis 50 Years Ago.

Famous as a glamourous belle wherever youth and beauty gathered to waltz the hours away in old St. Louis half a century ago, Mrs. Suzanne Slayback Adams is dead at 74.

Death came to Mrs. Adams at Garfield Hospital late yesterday. Saturday she slipped and fell down the steps at the home of her daughter, the Baroness Maximilian H. von Dagenhardt, 2415 Foxhall road, with whom she had made her home since 1930. She never regained consciousness.

Throughout the Mississippi River country, in the days of stately packets, top hats, duelling canes and luxurious victorias, Mrs. Adams, then simply Suzanne Slayback, was noted as the first of the socially prominent "veiled prophet queens" of St. Louis.

Back in 1878, at the inauguration of the colorful annual parade and ball of "His Majesty, the Veiled Prophet," Mrs. Adams was chosen belle of the ball. Fourteen years later the term "queen" came into general use.

The slender, well-born dandies of her era vied with each other for

Spain's Flying Romeo Arrives At Goal With His Ardor Cooled

Pombo Delays 4 Hours in Seeing Senorita After 4 Months' "Dash" to Mexico City; He Won't Talk of Marriage, But "Juliet" Stays True.

By the United Press.

Mexico City, Sept. 16.—Juan Ignacio Pombo, the Spanish flying Romeo, who lost an airplane and his appendix in a four-month "dash" to meet Maria Elena Rivero, his announced "childhood sweetheart," finally met the senorita today, but his ardor seemingly had cooled en route.

He delayed four hours after his arrival before meeting Maria Elena and when he finally did see her he showed her but slight attention. Asked if he would marry the Spanish beauty, he coldly replied:

"I don't want to talk about that."

Maria Elena, however, greeted Pombo warmly and was entuhiastic about his arrival. He got there just in time, for tonight Maria Elena leaves with her mother for Vera Cruz, from where they will sail for Spain immediately.

Pombo's coldness was in marked contrast to his romantic departure more than four months ago from Santander, Spain. Then he carried her picture next his heart and said they were to be married.

It contrasted also with Maria Elena's attitude. While awaiting him in Mexico she lost her father and also planned to be operated upon unnecessarily for appendicitis with the sole purpose of remaining in Mexico to meet Pombo.

Newspapermen were not allowed to witness the meeting, but Maria Elena a few minutes later brought Pombo to a private room to meet newspapermen. Pombo said he was staying in Mexico "a few days" despite Senorita Rivero's departure tonight. In her presence he refused to discuss the possibility of marriage.

Pombo, Maria Elena and her mother lunched together at the Spanish Embassy. While they were eating, the newspaper El Chifion issued an "extra" ridiculing Pombo,

McAdoos Arise With the Dawn To Start Honeymoon Flight

After hiding away in a Washington apartment over the week-end, Senator and Mrs. William G. McAdoo arose with the birds yesterday and slipped from town before anyone, including the press agent for Central Airlines, knew it. The press agent apologized later in the day for his oversight and in Pittsburgh and Columbus, Ohio, the Senator waxed philosophical over the sprightliness of age.

Married Saturday, the 71-year-old California Senator and his quarter-of-a century bride spent yesterday flying toward the West Coast. When they return they probably will make their home at the Senator's apartment at the Shoreham, where they spent the week-end with only a garage employe getting a glimpse of them when they left for the airport yesterday at 7:45 a. m.

In Pittsburgh, the Senator predicted his autumn-spring marriage would be a success. There Mrs. McAdoo, the former Doris I. Cross, told the Associated Press that "the gap in our ages won't affect this marriage, for, you see, we have many things in common.

Mrs. Haley Fiske Is Granted Divorce

By the Associated Press.

Newark, N. J., Sept. 16.—Mrs. Helen Fiske was granted a divorce today from Haley Fiske, vice president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., and son of the late president of the company, on grounds of extreme cruelty.

Advisory Master Dougal Herr granted Mrs. Fiske $275 monthly support for her two daughters, Helen, 9, and Phyllis, 7. She asked no alimony.

Mrs. Fiske, the former Helen Lowe Rice, daughter of Mrs. William Lowe Rice, of New York, testified her husband beat her, blacking her eyes, bloodying her nose, and on one occasion spraining her wrist.

Cubs Win 13th, Maintain Lead

Rout Giants, 8 to 3, While Cards Keep Pace With 1-to-0 Victory.

The Chicago Cubs maintained their two-game lead in the National League pennant race yesterday with their thirteenth straight victory of their sensational late-season drive.

In the first game of their crucial series with the third-place Giants, the Cubs triumphed, 8 to 3, as Lon Warneke held the Giants to seven hits. Harry Gumpert, rookie Giant pitcher from Baltimore, was pounded out of the box.

The second-place St. Louis Cardinals matched the pace of the Cubs with a stirring 1-0 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers in a pitching duel in which Paul Dean won from Van Mungo. The Cardinals' triumph increased their advantage over the third-place Giants to 2½ games.

In the American League, the Detroit Tigers defeated the Red Sox, 5 to 2, to increase their league lead to 9½ games over the Yankees, who lost to St. Louis by the same score.

Gas Station Held Up.

Two armed colored men held up and robbed Edgar C. Whittaker, manager of a filling station at Potomac avenue and Eleventh street southeast, early yesterday and escaped with $5. Whittaker told police the men entered the place, forced him into a rear room and rifled the cash drawer.

King's Kidnaper Gets 10 Years, Accomplice Draws 18 Months

George O. Hewitt, 43, of Rosslyn, Va., convicted of kidnaping Benjamin H. King, 60-year-old Arlington Cemetery worker in July, yesterday was sentenced to serve 10 years in a Federal penitentiary by Federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut at Baltimore. He was the first man sentenced under the "Lindbergh law" in Maryland.

Warner W. Woods, 35, who had pleaded guilty to being an accomplice of Hewitt's when the pair forced King to go with them from Arlington to Marlboro, Md., where they attempted to obtain funds in a bank account of King's, was sentenced to serve 18 months.

In passing sentence, Judge Chesnut said that he believed the crime was "more a scheme to defraud than an actual kidnaping." The Federal attorney, Bernard J. Flynn, had asked the court to make the punishment of Hewitt 20 years in the penitentiary.

Hewitt already was under a three-year sentence for defrauding King of $3,000 by impersonating a Federal officer. In both that case and the kidnaping incident, Hewitt had represented himself to King as an income tax officer.

Part in 'Plot' On Long Is Laid To Prosecutor

Smith started his speech and the smoke spurted out of his nose in surprise. There was silence for 30 seconds and then the sound of Smith's heels clicking toward the door. Cheers broke out in a corner of the court. The room was packed to suffocation. Coatless, grinning men, their teeth stained yellow by tobacco, slapped Smith on the back as he pushed through the crowd and down the steps.

"In view of the speech made by the prospective witness," he said, "I also would like to make a statement to deny I was involved in any plot to kill Senator Long and when the witness says I was he is being a deliberate, vicious and malicious liar."

Friends and enemies of Long seemed eually divided in the courtroom, for the applause that followed Odom's statement was almost as loud as that raised for Smith.

No Action Planned.

After the inquest adjourned Odom was asked whether he planned to take action against Smith in view of the fact that the preacher was under subpena and had refused to testify.

"I'm not planning to do anything about it," Odom said. "It's a closed incident."

It was a strange scene in the courtroom. The coroner's jury of five lounged at a table in front of the witness box. At Odom's side sat Attorney General Gaston Porterie, a Long follower. In between questions put to Long's bodyguards by Odom, he and Porterie quarreled quietly over procedure. Porterie insisted that Odom ask each member of Long's bodyguard whether he wanted to testify and explain that he could refuse to do so on grounds that he might incriminate himself.

The most important of these bodyguards is a man of 30, 5 feet 7 inches tall, a crack shot with either rifle or pistol. He is Murphy Roden, who grappled with Weiss on the Statehouse floor during the shooting.

"Just tell us in your own words what happened that night," said Odom.

The story came out in the fumbling, faltering phrases of a man who never has been called upon to make a speech.

"Senator Long and I were in the House of Representatives that night," Roden said. "He walked out of there and went to the Governor's office and I waited at the door. He came out and yelled back to somebody to be sure to have everybody at the Legislature meeting at 9:30 the next morning.

Tells of Shooting.

"We walked on down the corridor. Mr. Weiss stepped out from behind a pillar and stuck a gun in Senator Long's stomach and fired. I grabbed at Weiss with my left hand. I thought it was going to be a free for all. Weiss and I stumbled to the floor. That floor's slick and you can hardly stand up on it."

"Di Dr. Weiss say anything to you?" Odom asked.

"He didn't say anything. The Senator let out a yell when the bullet hit him. I got up off the floor and got my gun and started shooting."

"How many shots did you fire at Dr. Weiss?"

"Ten."

"Why did you keep shooting at him."

"Well, I had smoke in my eyes and I had some powder burns. Weiss kept trying to shoot me, so I backed away and shot at him."

"But why did you keep on shooting at him after he was dead?"

"I didn't know he was dead and I was trying to keep him from shooting me."

Then Joe Messina, another Long bodyguard, came to the witness chair. He had a lump in his throat when Long's name was mentioned and there were lengthy, melancholy pauses between his sentences.

He admitted firing at Weiss after he was on the floor.

"There is something else I want to say," Messina then explained. "The Senator was my best friend and some time ago a fellow came to me named Sidney Sonjy. He's a friend of mine, too. This fellow Sonjy told me there was a plot to kill the Senator. He said he had been asked to join it. He said he wouldn't do it, that he didn't want any part of it. He said these fellows had all kinds of guns and grenades."

Brother Tells of Plot

James O'Connor, sr., assistant attorney general at New Orleans, said there a man, whom he declined to name, had come to his office and made an affidavit respecting an alleged murder plot against Senator Long and the affidavit had been "turned over to the proper authorities." He refused to say what authorities.

At Dequeen, Ark., Dr. George S. Long, of Tulsa, Okla., brother of the assassinated "dictator," said followers of the late Senator had evidence that a plot to murder him was instigated by four Congressmen in a New Orleans hotel.

Dr. Long was in Dequeen to address a share-our-wealth meeting.

Dr. Long said a voice-recording machine has disclosed that Dr. C. A. Weiss, jr., had drawn the "short straw."

"Just as Huey P. Long's enemies sat in conference to plot his removal," Dr. Long said, "just so must his friends sit in conference to plot removal of his enemies, but will do so by the ballot.

"We will not tolerate violence in any form—and will not harm the hair of one of his enemies' heads."

During the inquest there was a furore when testimony was given that Senator Long's mouth bore a fresh cut as he reached the hospital. The statement led to conjecture over what happened the night of the tragedy.

Between You and Me

Pricking the Democratic Revolt Bubble; How to Play "Bury the Hatchet;" Freedom Note.

By Raymond Clapper

THOSE who have their eyes on the facts instead of on the ballyhoo will knock a large discount off of the talk about an uprising of good old-fashioned Democrats against President Roosevelt.

Plenty of good Democrats not only disapprove of many measures advocated by Mr. Roosevelt but they stood up and said no and voted against. It got to be an epidemic.

That naturally led to fond expectations that the old-fashioned Democrats who thus took the warpath were going to keep right on hacking away at Mr. Roosevelt until they hatcheted him out of the White House. Democrats like Bainbridge Colby found they could climb out of long obscurity by talking about an independent Democratic Party. Paper organizations are being formed and contributions are being eagerly solicited. Newspapers and the air are full of ringside descriptions of this great uprising.

But nothing is more fallacious than the assumption that a Democratic Senator or Representative, just because he opposed some of the most important New Deal measures, is going back home and stand as an opponent of President Roosevelt. If there is anybody who can bury the hatchet faster than a politician, it is two politicians.

That is what is happening now among the Democrats. The moment Congress adjourned they made for home as fast as they could to explain what good buddies they and the President are. All over the land, these Senators and Representatives are back home, doing their fence repairing, digging new post holes and hiding their hatchets in them.

Observe at their hatchet-burying rites two of the ablest and most prominent old-fashioned Jeffersonian Democrats—Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, and Senator Thomas P. Gore, of Oklahoma. No two Democrats registered their dissent from the New Deal more eloquently or more forcibly, so much so in the case of Senator Glass that he was treated last June to a tour of our best universities, where imposing collections of Tories in scholarly mortarboards loaded him, until he staggered like a bemedaled admiral, with honorary degrees, pronouncing him a scholar and a gentleman of the old school.

But now both of these sturdy old Jeffersonians are back among their respective constituents, getting set for reelection next year, and their technique is instructive because it not only is typical but a model of professional skill.

Senator Glass appears before the Young Democratic Club of Richmond, Va., and explains that President Roosevelt really appreciates men who have the courage of their convictions. And, to make it clear that he was correctly stating the situation, he related that he had left Washington with the President's blessing:

"He is," said Senator Glass, "my affectionate friend and I am his affectionate friend and the last words I had with him before I left the National Capital were: 'God-speed and good wishes.'"

Senator Glass refused to become Mr. Roosevelt's Secretary of the Treasury because he had misgivings about the Roosevelt fiscal and monetary policies. But next year's safest bet is that Presidential Candidate Roosevelt and Senatorial Candidate Glass, arm in arm, will take the Old Dominion like Japan took Manchuria.

Similar hatchet-burying rites are taking place out on the plains of Oklahoma. Senator Gore voted with Senator Glass against many of the outstanding New Deal measures. But he is speaking around his State daily and speaking as a friend of the Administration. Although he voted against numerous measures because he believed them unconstitutional, Senator Gore is for the President in spite of them and proclaims himself still a good Democrat. His audiences are informed that on many votes he stood by the President—and at times when his vote was needed.

Like Senator Glass, he can go back to his constituents, a number of whom are trying to snatch the senatorial nomination away from him, and stand ensconced under the blessing of Mr. Roosevelt.

A few weeks after inauguration, Senator Gore called on Mr. Roosevelt.

"Mr. President," Senator Gore said in substance, "I hope you are not going to be like Woodrow Wilson. If you didn't agree with everything he wanted you were ostracized (as Senator Gore was). I expect to disagree with you at times."

Mr. Roosevelt nodded and said that was all right.

A month ago, so the Senator's friends report, Senator Gore returned to the White House, and the President said in substance: "I am awfully fond of Carter Glass and I hope he will be re-elected. Your case and Carter's are similar as far as I am concerned and I hope you'll be re-elected.

And in Gore's case has come humorous but useful aid from Postmaster General Farley. Writing as Democratic national chairman, over his own green ink signature—or maybe it was a rubber stamp signature they use for him at national committee headquarters—Farley extended to the Senate rebel "sincere and heartfelt thanks for the excellent manner in which you co-operated with the Administration on the passage of legislation at the recent session of Congress," adding, "I want you to know how much I appreciate the splendid co-operation which you extended."

It always has been said that you can count on the Democrats to get into a row among themselves. But they make up faster than a bride and groom.

exchange of views" and to observe all international engagements, Lozoraitis added.

"The annals of my country bear evidence to the injustices it has suffered, but Lithuania remains serene in the consciousness of its inviolate honor."

Beck revived the controversy begun Saturday by Litvinoff when he made what was regarded as a critical allusion to the non-aggression pact between Germany and Poland.

He said Litvinoff's remarks were "a matter of complete indifference to Poland," but that as a representative of one of the first members of the League he could not avoid the conclusion "that such unusual procedure would tend to damage the co-operation essential to League meetings."

He made no reference to the Italo-Ethiopian dispute, which was interpreted as meaning Poland will join Germany in a policy of complete neutrality.

When Litvinoff mounted the rostrum this afternoon to reply to Beck, the Polish delegation left the hall.

Litvinoff, voicing regret at Beck's speech, said he merely gave the Assembly his estimation of different conceptions of pacts between nations and that there was no justification for Beck's answer.

Soviet Russia, he said, always has been friendly to Poland.

Eamon de Valera, president of the Irish Free State, joined eagerly in the rally around the League Covenant. His sentiments were echoed by Galileo Solis, of Panama, and Gen. Alfred Nemours, the delegate for Haiti.

Almost in the same words used by the British and French delegates last week and repeated by spokesmen from other nations, De Valera told the Assembly:

Democracy's Doom Forecast by Hitler

was of special note, however, since Hitler addressed his soldiers and reviewed the troops. Later he inspected their bivouacs.

Hitler appealed to them, as he so often has, for discipline, decency, hardness of physique and strength of character.

"Service under the colors has always been the highest honor in Germany," he told them. "This service requires great sacrifices both from you, my soldiers, and from the German people. But we all make these sacrifices cheerfully.

"Our glorious army of imperial days was a wonderful school for our people. It made men of us. The old Germany is not dead. It merely rested and now it has risen again in you."

He asserted the World War army in reality had not been defeated but came out from that conflict with its honor unscratched.

The military exhibits laid emphasis upon German defense preparations. The bombing planes swooped over Nurnberg, demonstrating their fitness to repel air attacks.

Lieut. Ernst Udet, World War ace, in an exhibition flight dropped 1,000 feet to zoom over a house which then went up in flames, while a squad of bombers set fire to an artificial village.

Young Navy Flier Dies In Crsah in California

San Diego, Calif., Sept. 16 (AP).—Lieut. Charles Keith Palmer, 27, Navy flie, was killed today when his single-seater fighting plane failed to come out of a mile-high dive and crashed at Border Field, San Ysidro. The plane was attached to VB-2 Squadron, U. S. S. Saratoga. It was engaged in gunnery practice.

Palmer was a graduate of Annapolis, class of 1931. Near relatives are his widow and a month-old son, and his mother, who lives in Timmonsville, S. C.

Suzanne Adams Famed as Belle, Dies in Capital

Mrs. Adams favor as ladies and their escorts whirled lightly beneath chandeliers and high ceilings to the lilting notes of Viennese waltzes. Before her marriage Mrs. Adams was known as the most beautiful girl in St. Louis.

Had Mrs. Adams lived a little longer, she planned to return to thescenes of her youth and attend this year's Prophet Queen's Ball.

Mrs. Adams' father was an historic figure across the American scene. A slave holder and an owner of rich lands, he nelisted in the Confederate Army when the first gun had rumbled its message of war at Fort Sumpter.

Rising swiftly, he became Gen. Slayback, and he fought bitterly, while his daughter, whose memory remained keen to the end, grew up.

Fled to Mexico.

Disgusted because the cause of the South was defeated, Gen. Slayback gathered around him a group of campanions and fled to Mexico. At the shallow, muddy Rio Grande they buried the American flag and joined the forces of the unhappy Emperor Maximilian.

For his valor, Maximilian made Gen. Slayback Duke of Oaxaco, Mexico's most southern province. The fall of the Mexican Empire brought Gen. Slayback to St. Louis, where he distinguished himself as a lawyer, being thrice president of the Missouri Bar Association.

In 1882, he entered the office of the St. Louis Post Dispatch and engaged in an argument with the city editor. In the fight that followed Gen. Slayback was shot to death.

Mrs. Adams married Dr. Arthur Wellington Adams, an inventor and a graduate of the Georgetown Medical School, in 1883. She returned to the Middle West.

Lived With Memories.

Upon the death of her husband, in 1930, she came to Washington to be with her daughter, the Baroness. There she lived much in seclusion—greatly, her daughter said yesterday, among the memories of her girlhood, and of the glamorous days that followed in a mellower era.

Surviving Mrs. Adams, in addition to her daughter, are two sons, Blakeney and Wellington Adams, of St. Louis, and three other daughters, Mrs. William S. Pullis, of California; Mrs. William A. Hart, of Florida, and Mrs. George I. Bartling of St. Louis.

Funeral services had not been completed yesterday, but they probably will be in historic St. Albans.

U. S. Is Victor In First Battle Over Coal Act

to restrain the Government from enforcing the act, Carter also asked that, in effect, he be restrained from subscribing to the provisions o fthe act. The directors of his company had instructed him to adhere to the requirements of the act and the stockholders had approved that attitude.

Carter, however, maintained that the decision of the directors to conform to the statute was a violation of their corporate authority and that as a stockholder he had a right to seek to enjoin such action. The corporation, not a party to the suit, placed itself in the hands of the court, stating it would be guided by whatever the court decided.

15 Per Cent Tax Assailed.

Frederick H. Wood, counsel for Carter and one of the attorneys who successfully attacked the NRA in the Schechter case, contended that the 15 per cent tax on the gross sales of coal producers failing to subscribe to the provisions of the act was both a punitive and confiscatory levy.

Those producers subscribing to the coal "code" are entitled, under the act, to a 90 per cent drawback of the tax, thus reducing their levy to less than 1½ per cent. Wood argued that the proposed tax was but a subterfuge on the part of the Government to get around the Supreme Court's decision in the Schechter case.

If the Federal Government can impose such a tax for the purpose of regulating interstate commerce, Wood maintained, "then Congress has the power at any time to convert this country into a national Socialistic State, a Soviet, a Fascist or a Nazi State."

He referred to President Roosevelt's letter to Congres before adoption of the legislation urging that doubts as to the constitutionality of he act, "however reasonable," should not prevent its passage, as evidence that there was fear in high places that the measure was invalid, even before its passage.

Dickinson Wins Plea.

Assistant Attorney General John Dickinson, representing the Government, did not undertake to defend the constitutionality of the act, but urged that the Carter suit be dismissed on the ground it was premature. He pointed out that the commission provided for by the act ha dnot yet been appointed, that the tax Wood complained of had not been levied, and that the Carter company was unable to show it had been injured. He denied the Government would seek to retard a decision on the merits of the act, once it is put into operation.

Justice O'Donoghue acepted Dickinson's view of the case in a brief decision. He pointed out that until the coal commission is named and under takes to promulgate wages and workinf conditions for the coal industry he would unable to reach o conclusion.

proval was given 14,094 other labels, and the rest were rejected.

By vetoing "misleading" labels, revoking licenses of "unfair" companies, and even taking offenders into court, the FACA under Administrator Choate sought to stamp out what it considered evils.

Among these, officials listed "tied houses," which are retail establishments pledged to buy only from one producer or wholesaler; the practice of taking back goods once sold, offering prizes and premiums as inducement to sales, misleading advertising and labeling.

Officials said the "tied house" evil was found most in the brewing industry. While 15 of these cases were investigated by FACA agents, another 22 cases in which brewers had furnished prizes, loans, fixtures or signs to retail outlets, were referred to the Justice Department his flight and his reputed love affair.

The romance of the flight first was dimmed when, on Pombo's much publicized departure from Spain, Maria Elena's father said his daughter was "embarrassed by the malicious publicity" attached to the flight. He said Pombo and his daughter were only casual childhood friends.

Maria Elena was not at the airport to welcome Pombo, but remained at the Spanish Embassy "on account of mourning for my father." Senor Tomas Rivero died during Pombo's flight.

At the embassy, Maria Elena said she was "very happy that Pombo has arrived." She added: "I can not say anything else."

Asked if Pombo will sail for Spain on the same ship, she said he would not.

Scouts Blasted Romance.

"Well, it looks as if there isn't much of a romance," a reporter remarked.

"You newspapermen are too fast at drawing conclusions," she replied.

Pombo left Santander, his native village in Spain, last May 14.

He navigated the South Atlantic quickly and safely, but crashed at Camocim, Brazil. This was only the beginning of a long series of delays. At San Jose, Costa Rica, he was stricken with appendicitis and had an operation. Pombo's disinclination to pass up any Latin-American city en route where a crowd might cheer him also delayed his purported romantic dash to his sweetheart's side.

Last night, to climax his series of misadventures, he roared over here during a fog, unaware that Maria Elena was just below, and overshot Mexico City by 200 miles, landing at San Marcos on the Pacific Coast.

proof THAT THOMAS GROWS HAIR

Wm. Beckmann (As he is today)

THE above photographs show how Thomas treatment re-grows hair even in extremely serious* cases of complete baldness. Within five weeks after Mr. Beckmann was accepted for treatment in a Thomas office, new hair was visible on his scalp.

Perhaps the condition which is causing your loss of hair may not be as serious as was Mr. Beckmann's. Regardless as to what the cause may be, it will surely lead you to baldness unless you promptly take proper steps to overcome it. Dandruff, for example, is the most common and most deadly enemy of hair health. Thomas treatment effectively overcomes dandruff, stops falling hair, itching scalp and promotes hair growth on thin and bald spots. In fact, The Thomas' successfully treat all of the 14 local scalp disorders which are responsible for 90% of all baldness.

Come in today and have a talk with a Thomas expert. No charge is made for a complete scalp examination nor for consultation. (Scalp examination, consultation, and treatment are always in private.)

John Smith Map Of D. C. Border Hit at Hearing

Counsel Attacks Virginia Claims Based on Words of Captain.

Renewing contentions that high-water mark is the true boundary between Virginia and the District—historical maps notwithstanding—Henry H. Glassie, special assistant to the Attorney General, yesterday started his final summary, explaining the Government's side of the current District-Virginia boundary dispute.

In earlier arguments, Frank L. Ball, Virginia counsel, had presented to the District-Boundary Commission a map of the disputed area. It was reputed to have been drawn from observations of Capt. John Smith during explorations of the Potomac River. It showed, Ball pointed out, that a section known as "Alexanders Island" (now site of the Washington-Hoover Airport) was a part of the Virginia mainland, thus proving that low-water mark is the true boundary.

Yesterday Glassie opened his summary with a denunciation of the John Smith map.

"Capt. John Smith's map was made from his observations while cruising the Potomac and nearby rivers in an open boat. It was made from what he happened to remember and from what the Indians told him. That map can't prove a thing. He made it with intentions of showing England what this country looked like—not to depict exact boundaries."

He continued by citing Supreme Court and other decisions holding that the boundary is at high-water mark along the Virginia shore.

The Supreme Court on several occasions, Glassie declared, has ruled that the charter by which King Charles II granted to Lord Baltimore the Province of Maryland in 1632 fixed the boundary on Virginia's shoreline.

He cited decisions showing that the subsequent grant by King James II to Lord Culpeper, including properties in Virginia's "eastern neck" from the Potomac to the Patuxent rivers did not change the boundary line.

Meanwhile, indications that the long boundary hearings will reach an early end with a definite agreement between opposing forces loomed strongly yesterday. Glassie will continue his summary today.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker.
Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

Mrs. Bernice Heffner, of Veterans' Administration, Detroit, who was elected national secretary of the American Federation of Government Employes at the Cincinnati convention. Mrs. Heffner succeeds Miss Esther Penn, of Seattle.

THE Agriculture Home Project was formally opened last night to all Government employes who wish to apply for homes in the development recently started by the Community Planning Association, for Department of Agriculture employes, it is announced by George Day (P), BAE, secretary.

BAKER.

Only 17 home sites are still available in the original plan, which, according to Mr. Day, offers the advantage of a large discount.

The project was launched by Agriculture employes, seeking a solution to the housing shortage facing Government people in Washington.

"The homes are within reach of people of moderate incomes," Mr. Day pointed out, "and are well-constructed and in good taste—making a harmonious colonial group."

The association has selected a site within the city limits of Alexandria, on high ground above Jefferson Park, said to be especially accessible to the department.

Directors of the association include:

Frank Sammons, chairman; Mr. Day, secretary; Miss Helen Albright, Information Service; Rodge Matteson, Robert U. Bonnar, chairman of the department's architect committee; and H. E. Bradburn.

Dr. W. E. Fleming and F. E. Baker, entomologists, Division of Japanese and Asiatic Beetle Investigation, Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, have collaborated in writing a 90-page booklet on "The Use of Carbon Disulphide Against the Japanese Beetle," just published by Agriculture.

Banquet for Dr. Grant.

Dr. Hugh G. Grant (P), Division of Western Affairs, State, and Mrs. Grant will be honored by the Alabama State Society at a banquet Thursday at the University Club. Dr. Grant, formerly president of the Alabama Society, recently was appointed Minister to Albania. The Grants, with their daughter, Louise, will sail for Europe aboard the S. S. Washington September 25.

Dr. Leonhard Stenjneger, head curator, Division of Biology, National Museum, has written a book, "Stellar, the Naturalist," to be published next month by Harvard University Press.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P, or C follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary Editor today only between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, Al Trahan, Little Jackie Heller and other acts; screen, John Boles and Dixie Lee in "Redheads on Parade"), or to P, Loew's Palace (Will Rogers in "Steamboat 'Round the Bend"), or to C, Loew's Columbia (fourth week of Clark Gable, Jean Harlow and Wallace Beery in "China Seas").

A Federal employes "Get Acquainted Club"—to foster friendship among newcomers to Washington—has been organized with A. P. Jones (F), Resettlement Administration, as president. Although originating in Resettlement, the club plans to broaden its activities to include all Government agencies. Social events will be held every two weeks with a picnic planned as the first.

HOLC Bowling Season.

HOLC's Girls Bowling League of ten teams will launch its season at 8 p. m. Wednesday at the Lucky Strike Alleys, with Miss Mary Norris (P), Standard Oil Building, as president. There is still room in the league for two more teams, Miss Norris says.

The following are team captains: Hazel Terry, Marie Pryor (C), Jane Linthicum, Anne Budesheim, Elizabeth F. Tew, Desma McInturff (C), Louise Ramey, Mae Boucher, Hilma Sturdyvin and Blanche Hubbard (C).

Chairman John H. Fahey, HOLC, has been invited to roll the first ball at the opening of the HOLC's Men's Bowling League at 8 p. m. Wednesday at Columbia Alleys. Twenty-four teams are enrolled for the season.

Random Postettes.

Mrs. Hilda W. Foss, AAA, was a recent guest of honor at a party given by Mr. and Mrs. Grant Edelin.

Mrs. George E. Shaw (P), FERA, has returned from Rhode Island.

Arthur W. Loveren (F), audit division, General Accounting Office, and Mrs. Loveren, are back from a two-weeks' vacation with friends and relatives in western New York.

Miss Kathleen H. Mogre (C), Census Bureau, enjoyed her vacation at Virginia Beach.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Hollywood, Sept. 16.

WILLIAM POWELL and Jean Harlow had a quarrel—which may only prove that they are in love . . . Charles Ruggles and not Frank Morgan will play the Victor Moore role in the flicker version of "Anything Goes." A new song written for it is a ditty called "Shanghai-de-Ho" . . . Jack Kirkland has been escorting the new beauty, Irene Bennette, about town . . . Alice Faye and Billy Seymour have been dancing "Cheek to Cheek" . . . Lily Pons recorded the songs for her flicker, "Love Song," but has had such difficulty trying to appear to sing them to the playback for the camera that the songs will be recorded again with Miss Pons actually singing while she is being photographed . . . Eleanor Powell sends a telegram, almost daily, to her favorite in Hollywood . . . After a preview one of the cards mailed to the producer said: "It is a nice picture, but it isn't as good as the reviews will say it is."

BRUCE.

* * * *

Director Norman Tourog rates a bow for the excellent work he did on "The Big Broadcast," especially for the way he took the vaudeville act, Willie, West and McGinty and routined it as a running gag . . . The Ethel Merman number with the elephants was filmed for the flicker, "We're Not Dressing," and never used. Miss Merman had to be paid again for permission to use it in this picture . . . "The Big Broadcast" destroys a radio illusion when it shows Henry Wadsworth singing for Jack Oakie over the air . . . The story calls for Wadsworth to sing for Oakie, but Wadsworth is not a singer and in the picture he didn't actually do the singing for Oakie. A fellow named Kenny Baker did the singing for Wadsworth.

* * * *

GRETA GARBO didn't go to Salzburg to attend the Max Reinhardt festival as she had intended . . . Anita Louise and Tom Brown have resumed their romance . . . Walter Donldson and Harold Adamson have written a ditty called, "She's a Follies Girl," which will be in "The Great Ziegfeld" . . . Robert Taylor's leading lady off the screen continues to be Irene Hervey . . . Jane Froman startled every one on the "Stars Over Broadway" set by refusing to kiss James Melton. Miss Froman declared that the only man she kisses is her husband . . . Caesar Romero has been stepping out with Virginia Bruce . . . Albert Hackett was an actor in "Whoopee" for which Seymour Felix staged the dances. Seymour, after seeing Hackett at Metro practically every day, said to William McGuire: "Poor Albert Hackett, I always see him at the studio walking with his agent and I never see him on the screen. It's too bad he can't get a job." McGuire answered: "That's not Hackett's agent, that's his wife, Frances Goodrich, and they wrote 'The Thin Man,' and he's one of the highest salaried writers at Metro."

* * * *

Edward G. Robinson will play the role of Duke in the flicker version of "The Petrified Forest," which must be altered to please the censors . . . Michael Curtiz threw a party for Alexander Korda and invited many bitter Hollywood enemies. Sam Goldwyn and Darryl Zanuck were among the many guests who disliked each other . . . The Mae West and Marlene Dietrich flickers both go into actual production this week . . . Nick Foran and Mae Clark are a regular romance . . . Walter Wanger, during the war, was an aviator in the Italian army. He was known as the Austrian ace—because he brought down so many Italian planes.

* * * *

FRED ASTAIRE will get a percentage on his next flicker, "Follow the Fleet" and Ginger Rogers got her salary raise . . . George Barne's genuine romantic interest is a gal named Gean Ames . . . Ina Claire in "Ode to Liberty" is the main attraction for the movie actresses this week. They admire both her performance and her gowns . . . She is stopping at William Haines' house while in town. John Gilbert was a visitor at the show . . . Harold Arlen and Yip Harburg have written an excellent song, "Last Night When We Were Young," which will be sung by Lawrence Tibbett in "Metropolitan" . . . Whenever Jack Warner walked on the set of the "Frisco Kid," he would find Cliff Kling, the staff photographer assigned to make the publicity stills, sitting . . . One day Warner said to Kling, "Why is it that I always see you sitting?" Kling answered, "Because I can only find a chair when you come on the set."

September PAY DAY SALE

USED CARS

Buying a used car now is like buying an overcoat in March. The big difference is that you can use the car just as much as you could at the beginning of the season. This is the end of the season for automobiles. It's nearing the time for the new models. That is why you can now buy good cars and recent models so reasonably.

This pay day sale especially means even lower prices.

Self-Help The Best Help.

The National Labor Board, established under the Wagner act, is creating an extensive and elaborate organization for dealing with alleged violations of labor's guaranteed rights of collective bargaining. Regional agencies have been established in 21 cities to investigate charges preferred, and to decide whether the complaints are justified. Following judicial procedure, either side may appeal to the National Board for a reversal of the decision, and an employer may carry his case finally to a circuit court of appeals.

While this hierarchy of administrative agencies, exercising judicial functions, is doubtless necessary to carry out the provisions of the law, it affords no guarantee that collective bargaining will be successfully maintained. On the contrary, frequent appeals to the Federal authorities to protect labor groups against employer restraints or interference would indicate an inherent weakness in the system, due either to lack of initiative and independence on the part of labor or to a form of bargaining unsuited to the requirements of the industry or the plant.

Legal machinery to give effect to the coercive power of the Federal law is at best a negative aid to workers seeking to obtain and hold the rights "guaranteed" to them under the Wagner act. The difficulties that lead to appeals to the Federal authorities originate in individual plants. Efforts should be concentrated, therefore, upon devising systems that will reduce the chances of disputes to a minimum. Issuance of "cease and desist orders" against an employer after trouble has developed is a very poor substitute for an effective bargaining mechanism that will avert the difficulty in its early stages.

Progress By Bus.

There is often a certain nostalgia at the passing of old customs. But there are few local regrets over the very considerable replacement of noisy and slow trolley cars for swifter, more silent buses. Washington now takes its rightful place with those cities that have seen the error of their ways in overlooking buses as a solution to certain traffic problems. While they do not solve the entire transportation tangle in the District, at least they are a quieter, speedier and more comfortable step in the right direction.

The Capital Transit Co. can not, and does not, take full credit for this new and more efficient scheme of commuting. It was in part a child of necessity adopted by the company after the Public Utilities Commission had refused permission for street cars to run across Taft Bridge. The Beeler report, a comprehensive outline of Washington's traffic and trackage system, was another helpful guide in pointing the way to this latest capital innovation.

The change, though it had been discussed for months, was effected so skillfully that it has come almost as a surprise. Many of the connections are still awkward to the public, and as a result some temporary dissatisfaction may be expected. But once the irregularities are ironed out, the local and express schedules perfected, and the public accustomed to the bus routes, there is no doubt that the new system will be found a great step forward.

Boom In Brass.

Perhaps the most depressing news of the week is that business is booming in Waterbury, Conn.

To say this in the midst of a depression requires some explanation. But the explanation is simple. Waterbury, Conn., is the site of three large brass and copper rolling mills. Brass and copper are used in building houses; it is even sometimes used in the construction of those houses which, we were promised, would replace the slums of the Nation under the New Deal. Brass and copper is also used in making shells. It's shells, not houses, that have brought the boom in brass to Waterbury, Conn.

No fortnight in the last six years has seen business as active as was the first half of September in Waterbury, Conn. Unemployment is out of the picture; operations are on a 24-hour basis. From buildings where, in 1914 and 1915, orders for British munitions were filled at breath-taking pace "all novelty-making machinery" has been removed, says the United Press.

This is good news, of course. Waterbury has not seen much industrial activity since 1918. But now it's booming again, and munitions are "reliably reported" as on their way to Italy. Of course there is nothing for us to worry about. Didn't Congress pass a law just last month which told the President we must be neutral? And if Italy should happen to invade Ethiopia without the formality of declaring war—well, business is booming in Waterbury again, and that's what we've been looking for since 1929. Or is it?

The Fundamental Clash.

If any further revelation were needed of the menace to civilization implicit in dictatorships, it was supplied by Hitler in his address at Nurnberg on Sunday. Speaking before the group of Nazi sycophants to which the once honorable German Reichstag has degenerated, Der Fuehrer ordered the approval of edicts depriving Jews of German citizenship and otherwise restoring the practices of mediaeval Europe.

It is, of course, not the German Jews but the German nation which is dishonored by this display of atavism. Hitler's latest proscription can only hasten the already rapid decay of every aspect of German civilization. The military services are probably the one aspect of German life which has not been seriously injured by the triumph of the Swastika. And the world is treated to the gorgeous irony of a country priding itself on its power to defend a culture which is now largely non-existent.

Unfortunately, however, the problem of Hitlerism goes much deeper than its oppression of a single gifted race, or its termination of a great chapter in the history of civilization. Hitlerism is a threat to all mankind because it assumes the right of a crude fanaticism to destroy a communal heritage. As the Germans have often claimed Shakespeare, so has the world claimed Kant, Goethe, Beethoven, Einstein and many other masters who happened to do their universal work in Germany. Mankind can not regard with indifference the appalling ease with which a single mountebank can sweep away a structure so laboriously and co-operatively built. That is the deeper issue which Westbrook Pegler fails to envisage in his article on the page opposite today. It is not a matter of the persecution of this group or that. It is a barbarian attitude which all who are conscious of the dangers besetting western civilization must oppose.

And Hitler is only one aspect of the crisis. Exactly the same problem is now being posed in another form by Mussolini. Here, too, a single leader of crude background and fanatical will is threatening destruction to an overdue institution of progressive co-operation which has been reared by the slow and patient efforts of thousands of gifted individuals. Indeed tyranny such as that of Hitler and Mussolini is something far more alarming than any of the terrible oppressions of history. None of these threatened such wholesale destruction to ideals, none of them struck at the very basis of human advancement, with anything like the menace implied by the modern totalitarian state.

A comforting aspect of the situation lies in the fact that these similar dictatorships are, by their highly nationalistic nature, antagonistic rather than complementary. As Hitler's Nurnberg speech indicates, he has no desire to assist a fellow-tyrant whose political objectives to a large extent run counter to his own. Realization of this fact has doubtless forwarded the marvelous demonstration of solidarity which has been seen at Geneva during the past few days. If Fascism can be handled now, the Nazi problem will be taken care of when it threatens to break over the borders of Germany. If, on the other hand, Mussolini can have "freedom of action" now, then Hitler will claim—and take—it later.

Democracy is not merely a system of government. It is a way of life, painfully and patiently devised to permit the individual to make his contribution for the welfare of a flexible society. Directly opposed is the Fascist theory that a rigid society should crush the individual to the pattern set by arbitrary will. In the clash between the two principles there can be no neutrality on the part of any thoughtful American. Fortunate as is our geographical isolation, it is what the Germans call the Zeitgeist—the dominant spirit of the times—which will inevitably determine the future of American civilization.

Old Wives' Tales.

Now, at last, the trend in biographies has hit a happy medium. Everyone, except the biographers themselves, have long known that there was a definite middle ground between the debunkers and the devotees. And in the past year, and more lately in the past few months, several books have appeared which substantiate this belief. They are written neither by professional belittlers nor worshipful members of those cults which inevitably spring up around outstanding literary figures. The new biographer, if you please, is just one of the family—sometimes a son, or a daughter, but more often the subject's own wife!

Mrs. D. H. Lawrence started the biographical ball rolling last year when she set forth a lucid picture of what it means to be married to a genius. It is, apparently, neither sunshine all the time, nor rain, but an occasionally judicious and often irrational blending of the two. Almost simultaneously came Sybil Bolitho's story of her life with the late William Bolitho, though it was more rhapsodic than realistic. Arnold Bennett wrote his own journal, perhaps in the hope of forestalling further comment. But in his case, the "best laid plans" more than came to naught. Not only did his wife realize royalties on their marriage; his mistress also has several chapters forthcoming on the subject.

And now Conrad of the gout, Conrad of "Youth," Conrad of "Victory," undergoes the goldfish-bowl treatment by his widow. The result makes Frieda Lawrence's stormy existence with D. H. seem as peaceful as evensong. Yet Jessie Conrad keeps a level head in viewing the past and concludes that the 30 years with the irascible Joseph were happy ones. Thus do we get the favorable with the unfavorable, the light with the shadows. In that combination lies the very essence of excellent biography. A definite trend in this direction is good news for readers. Whether it will be so welcome to husbands is another question.

A Problem of Adjustment.

The FERA order closing the doors of Washington's transient lodges to new arrivals, shows amazing indifference to the serious adjustment problems created by this sudden change of policy.

A transient relief system which has reputedly offered a "soft" harborage to a good many who prefer idleness is undoubtedly in need of reform. The transfer of employable transients to work-relief rolls should be effected with the greatest possible speed. But such action will not prevent an influx of transients who are already moving about the country. Temporary harborage has to be found for these individuals, unless they are to be turned into the streets, cold, hungry and properly resentful.

Private agencies in this city report that their facilities are entirely inadequate to accommodate the new arrivals whom the Federal Government is preparing to turn away. Under the circumstances it is evident that the authorities have assumed a responsibility which they can not in decency lay down without making some provisional arrangement for taking care of incoming transients. The burden of the complaint against the methods that are being followed is summed up by the secretary of the Council for Social Agencies, who says: "Having started to take care of the problem, the Federal Government oughtn't to drop it. At least not so suddenly. At least not without notice."

That, too, is in substance the burden of the complaint against WPA plans for indiscriminate transfers of people from direct relief to work relief, without taking time to study the consequences to the families of the workers. For example, work-relief wages may sometimes be inadequate to take care of large families. If the heads of these families are shifted from relief rolls to WPA pay rolls, new problems will be created with which private agencies will have to struggle. Washington relief workers are already receiving reports that WPA employés are deserting their families in order to insure retention of dependents on relief rolls.

The WPA rightly insists upon maintaining relief wages below the prevailing local rates in order to encourage a shift of workers to private employment. However, intelligent co-ordination of direct relief and work relief is essential to provide for those exceptional cases in which the pay is inadequate in relation to needs. Certainly every case of hardship which is not alleviated by a little intelligent planning will strengthen demands that the Government pay all relief workers much higher rates.

Presumably Washington offers a fair sample of the problems of adjustment that confront communities in all parts of the United States where the Federal Government is abandoning existing relief agencies without providing adequate substitutes for discarded machinery. Efforts to get away from demoralizing forms of direct relief are commendable. But they do not excuse bungling and unnecessary haste in making a transition from direct relief to work relief.

Not Out Of Season.

Only 98 more days until Christmas! Do your Christmas shopping now! To the average shopper such reminders would be ludicrous at this time of year. Yet to the wholesale buyers they are a reality as well as an unseasonable warning. For September is the month in which the majority of orders must be sent in to toy manufacturers if deliveries are to be made by the first of December. All the mechanical trains, the beautiful dolls, the constructive wooden sets, and the animated story books were viewed last spring in the Eastern markets. The buyers have been deliberating as to their choices for several months and now the mad scramble is on.

Each year toys get more complicated and more wonderful. Tiny fire engines now have realistic sirens. Woolly cats stick out flannel tongues mechanically. There are even miniature electric irons and toasters for the little housekeeper. Toyland is also feeling the effect of the more abundant life and under the tinselled tree this year may be found trucks bearing CCC insignia.

Only last week workmen in Santa Claus, Ind., started a shrine to the Grand Old Man of the White Whiskers. There will be a park dedicated to the children of the world; a mammoth statue of Santa himself and a doll house containing international exhibits. Such a memorial is particularly appropriate to that town and certainly it would be hard to find a more beloved character to honor. But memorials and parks commemorating the spirit of Christmas will never be really necessary so long as the toy markets are flooded with orders this far ahead of time.

"A 3-months-old girl, who had never spoken before, all at once began talking in complete and intelligible sentences."—Press report. What did she want?

An American isn't going to let anybody deprive him of the right to say what he pleases, even though he's afraid to do it most of the time.

An Appraisal of Huey.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The life and death of Huey Long constitute an episode, and nothing more, in the history of our times. Historians of the future writing perspectively will hardly rate the turbulent Louisianian as one having achieved in a national sense the importance of an Aaron Burr or even a John Brown.

Burr, by force of brilliant, rational intelligence, in the formative days of the Republic, had already left his impress upon civilization before the circumstance of events, leading to the duel with Hamilton, with its calamitious result, remade him who was a statesman into a would-be destroyer of the Government he had helped to create. There was pronounced similarity between Burr, after his downfall, and Long; their methods of execution were different, but both had dreams of an empire with themselves on the throne.

Brown, of course, was definitely a fanatic; but so was Long a fanatic. Brown in his time stirred up just as much of a furore as ever was stirred up by Long. But Brown now is regarded as an unimportant and useless figure in history, except that, by what he did, wholly outside the law, he came to be in an inflamed public mind the very personification of the "irrepressible conflict." All three, then—Burr, Brown and Long—were supreme egotists. Each was motivated by this quality. Only a few days before he died Long boasted that he had no bosses; as if that were a virtue, when at the moment he was attempting to boss everybody and everything in the universe.

Long was possessed of an uncanny resourcefulness. In his tilts and bouts in the Senate, involving intelligence in debate and parliamentary skill, he had the nimbleness of a cat or a tiger; he could be as gentle as the one or as ferocious as the other. He was a swashbuckler in rare surroundings—a natural, make-believe actor on a conspicuous stage with the world for an audience. It must be admitted by all that he made the most of his opportunity. But with all his make-believing he never seemed able to separate himself from his own selfishness. He advocated the distribution of wealth, but not his own wealth. It was said of him that he was a liberal spender, but he spent liberally only in his own advantage.

History, then, cannot write Long down as anything more than an adventurer. It cannot be said of him, even now, that he has helped in any material way the masses of the people he professed to love, but it may be said that he has added to their suffering and their bewilderment at a time when help was needed. If by his words or acts he has placed an adornment on our civilization, it is a tinsel trapping which already is pathetically faded and drooped in the sunbeams that dance merrily over a new made grave in the capitol grounds at Baton Rouge.

The Post Impressionist.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At first, I read the column headed "The Post-Impressionist" as a matter of routine in the hope, often before not realized, that here would be something worth using the time required to read a column.

To my surprise, as well as to my enjoyment, I found in this article novel points of view, expressed intelligently, in excellent English, salted with subtle wit, and sometimes with broad humor.

May I congratulate The Post on this column. As the column is not signed, I have no means of knowing who is responsible for it, but if you will accept the suggestion, I urge that the writer's name be given with his article, so that those who enjoy this feature may know who is responsible for its cleverness.

EDWIN FAIRFAX NAULTY.
Washington, Sept. 14.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I must be only one of very many who welcome the discovery that the "Post Impressionist" is Reginald Wright Kauffman.

This column has all the qualities of Mr. Kauffman's novels and poems. It is a daily stimulant to every intelligent reader of your excellent paper.

"Pitcairn Gained."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I inclose an editorial, headed "Pitcairn Gained," which I clipped from The Post of yesterday.

Stupidity and bad taste struggle for supremacy in this little editorial. I had not realized that the moral slump of the country, or of The Post, had reached such depth. However, I refuse to believe that conditions that now appear to give license to such sneers at the efforts or the personnel of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union can continue.

It is unnecessary to go beyond your own columns to find abundant evidence that rejection of prohibition and the substitution of the "sane" methods of politicians have not proven successful as temperance measures. Clearly, the question of the attitude of governments toward the traffic in alcoholic beverages is not yet settled.

C. V. BURNSIDE.
Washington, Sept. 14.

To The Editor of The Post—Sir: With reference to a recent editorial, titled "Pitcairn Gained," allow me to state the following:

It has been almost 150 years since Pitcairn was the "home of mutineers and scene of bloody travail."

It is over a hundred years since Pitcairners were "Christianized."

They are hermits, and, as such, are narrowly religious, almost fanatics—I believe their faith is the Seven Day Adventist—refusing to raise coffee because they believe the habit of drinking it would be contrary to God's will.

It is hard to believe that the winning of this island, peopled by some 200 souls who have never heard either telephone or radio and seldom wear shoes, was accomplished only after a desperate battle by the W. C. T. U. A. DESSART.

Problems Of Peace.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As conflict now seems inevitable between the aggressive Italian government and the empire of Ethiopia, the neutral nations, now that diplomatic negotiations seem on the brink of failure, must resort to forceful means if war is to be averted. But what means shall they apply? Should the world as a single power unite and by means of overwhelming odds conquer this pending menace to world peace? If such could come to pass the problem of centuries would be solved.

But such is highly improbable as long as one race feels superior to the other. Each nation feels intrigue behind the extended hand of his neighbor. Not to grasp that hand means to be regarded as an obstacle on the road of perennial peace. The problem then reaches the most perplexing stage. One nation agrees to the terms of another; a bilateral agreement which is at once disapproved by other powers who then turn to another power with a proposal which is accepted. This goes on until the nations have been divided.

A Throw-Back To Biologic Man.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Does it not appear to thinking observers of the Italo-Ethiopian impasse that the League of Nations has failed to show clear recognition of the international morality to which the peoples of the world have evolved?

Did not the World War indicate and act to further a moral sense of appreciating the other fellow's condition? When America entered the conflict to "make the world safe for democracy" was it not more than a mere phrase, and did not the great mass of the people respond to the sentiment? And is not democracy due to just that feeling of the equality of every individual's contribution, thus showing that each puts himself in the other fellow's situation as a person.

Why not ask Italy to state clearly just why she insists upon aggression, and thus let the world see how the national intent meets social ideals? It does seem that we are confronted in Europe by two nations with indications of a relapse into childhood where the feeling of "Ego," the "I," has not yet become the "ME"—the social self.

Religion, economics and science have pushed the world forward through the very universality of their appeals to men, yet we have this throwback to the old biologic man who would disturb and sacrifice progress to his personal gesture to some end not clearly determined in his own mind. One notices that Italian and German dictators identify themselves only with their own small sector of the human family. Why not draw them out by asking questions, as we do in education? Is there trouble at home? May we help? Feel insulted? Has someone injured your pride? How about making amends? Have you balanced the values? Let us try it in parallel columns. Make the Italian people see the other people in the world and their own incomparable history in its contributions to all the rest.

The Post Impressionist

The Camels Are Going.

Post Office, Tuesday.

WERE we the able conductor of "No End of Books," the book we should review today would be Dorothy F. Mayhew's translation of E. F. Gautier's "Sahara." And were we that able conductor's able associate, we should give a lot of space to it.

Not being either of those gentlemen, we shall write something about "Sahara" anyhow.

We should like to start thus, in the Hall manner:

"In the midst of a vacational 5,000-mile automobile drive through the Province of Quebec we thought of the lonely camel plodding across desert sands."

Or thus, in the mood of Mr. Schriftgiesser: "The philosopher of 'American Taste' has profoundly noted that the sands of Sahara are as numerous as those of the sea. So why should a French professor at the University of Algiers try to count them?" . . .

Unfortunately, we have never explored the wastes of Quebec, westward of Montreal—never read "American Taste!" We must essay the commonplace approach.

The Sahara is nature's Pandora of paradoxes. Douglas Johnson points them; Gautier elaborates them (Columbia University Press).

Nowhere else is found such aridity as in the Sahara, yet thither come also rains which wipe out whole towns. It ascends to 11,000 feet above sea-level—descends far below the ocean's floor. At certain of its altitudes, the mercury rises to 158; at those same altitudes, the caravan's drinking-water may freeze over night.

Untold thousands have died of thirst in these sandy wastes—whereas none need so die who can kill the plentiful adax, which carries in its viscera its own supply of not undrinkable water. Although the Sahara's nearly naked Tuaregs won't wash, the winds scour them clean. Across those fatal stretches not even Rome could march to conquest, yet so free from microbes are the keen airs that dangerous wounds heal with amazing ease. The Sahara bares and bends mountains, disclosing how the earth was made and how erosion may unmake it: a desolation of endless decay, it preserves, as fresh as when they first were put there, cliff-paintings nearly as old as mankind.

But not until this Gautier issued the present volume was there a genuine geographic classic in the list. That work made F.-G. the Theophile Gautier of the Great Desert. And now, for Miss Mayhew's translation, the author has supplied a wholly new ending: a picture of the Sahara opening its long reticent shell under pressure from the Mechanistic Age.

Take his chapter on that humped creature which people who can't think for themselves like to describe as "the ship of the desert."

Most of us accept the desert-camel as coeval with the Sahara. Gautier shows that oxen, elephants and horses were far earlier beasts of Saharan transport. He shows how it was the coming of the camel that made those regions possible for the white races.

Gautier, indeed, demonstrates that the camel is of comparatively recent advent there. Not until almost the latter days of the Western Empire did the camel penetrate into occidental Sahara:

"We may say there are two Saharas—the precameline and the cameline."

And now, Gautier makes it clear, there is to be a third. It is already upon us. The Post-Impressionist would call it the postcameline, or gasoline, Sahara.

For the camels are going. They did give the white man a means of slow progress across those billowing sands. Today he has been given a means of rapid transit by the automobile:

"With all the financial prodigality which characterized the World War, the use of airplanes and automobiles was put to the test for Saharan transport; and the results with motor vehicles at least were far from negligible. Prior to the war, they had been thought practicable for desert use; but with their introduction it was immediately apparent that they were not confined to the use of roads and could go cross-country . . . with perfect ease. The desert surfaces . . . offer astounding facilities."

To what will this lead? Gautier offers more than one speculation. But, after all, the charm of those speculations is not his ultimate lure.

The great thing about him is that he makes you feel the desert, its climate, life, structural formation, its eternal desiccation. He tells its history as John Richard Green told that of the English people—with a grace Green could never attain. As exacting as Green, Gautier describes the Sahara's fauna, flora, people and manifold physical expressions much as Cavalier lovers described the face and form of fickle mistresses. He is married to the desert; it is his—and he tempts you to break the Tenth Commandment.

Minding Our Own Business.

New York, Sept. 16.

THERE is an element of German Nazis in this country, including more than a few Hyphen-Heinies who hold American citizenship but still think Boche, who have been holding their Hitler meetings and Hitler drills.

What their object is, other than to kick up trouble in a land which has plenty of trouble of its own, it is hard to imagine. Nazism in Germany is said to have a patriotic purpose, and Germany is welcome to it. But it also represents tyranny over all dissenters and the most savage persecution of the Jews in particular and is, in round numbers, contrary to the whole American idea.

If the Germans, in Germany, wish to pay homage to a funny-looking fanatic with a Charlie Chaplin mustache and treat him as God that is their own hard luck. Americans can understand how it is, for a large proportion of this population had a similar brainstorm a few years ago and went around wearing nightshirts and calling their leaders Grand Imperial Klads and Klucks. They got over it in time, just as the Germans will get over their present trouble. The time will come when Germans of the present day, grown old and wiser, will wag their heads and feel sheepish inside as they look back on the day when they used to say "Heil Hitler" instead of "good morning" and toss the Nazi salute to every cop and garbage man because the cops and garbage men represented the Nazi state and thus embodied the majesty of the great idea.

• • • •

IF these Nazis in America, including the hyphens who can't quite make up their minds to be Americans, are so fond of the Nazi idea, then they must realize that their Hitler demonstrations in the United States are out of order. The Hitler scheme doesn't permit the propagation of any contrary political philosophy in Germany, and if a crowd of Americans in Berlin or Nurnberg were to hold noisy meetings and military drills dedicated to the proposition that the Jews are all right the Nazis would land all over them with rifle butts and blackjacks, toss them into jail, and, presently, heave them over the border. Under a strict application of the very theory of government which they are so fond of, our Nazis would be raided by the American police every time more than two of them came together, and, after some vigorous bouncing around in the back room of the nearest police station, would be dumped on board the first available boat and sent home.

The Germans haven't very good manners, as the British admiral truly said to the American admiral the time the German admiral got in the way in our little firecracker war with the Spaniards.

• • • •

OF course, Jews are by no means the only Americans, but we have a lot of them in the United States and they stand as well as the next people in the community. But every time a lot of Germans and hyphens get together for one of their pep meetings for handsome Adolf the occasion is an insult and a threat to the Jews of America in particular and a gesture of hostility toward the American form of government. There are no two ways about that. Any man who advocates a Nazi state in this country advocates the demolition of the American Republic and the substitution of a dictatorship under the sole management and subject to the murderous whims of the paranoiac who happens to be the head man.

It would make things easier, too, if the American Jews would moderate their protests and ballyhoo against the persecutions in Germany, in which they go too far at times. As Americans they naturally have a right to get sore at any injustice anywhere in the world, but what happens in the internal affairs of Germany or Mexico or Russia is not subject to outsiders except indirectly through the force of world opinion.

• • • •

AFTER all, the Jews in America are suffering no particular pain in their own country and the Jews in Germany, painful as their plight is, are foreigners to us. I still insist that if it is merely justice that we have in mind then there is plenty of home work to be done before we start policing the rest of the world, and the argument that injustice in this country is carried on without the Government's sanction whereas the persecutions in Germany are the operation of a definite government policy is no good either. The United States Government, by indifference, is just as much a party to the disfranchisement and industrial segregation of a large element of our population as the Nazi government is to the abuse of the Jews in Germany.

The Nazis in this country, citizens and aliens both, have a hell of a nerve to propagate their idea in a reasonably free land. But we can only guarantee that the Jews who are American citizens will not be maltreated in their own country, and that should be enough.

I still look for the formation of a big, popular American League for the Minding of Our Own Business.

John Paul Jones

By

William Lyon Phelps

I FIRST heard of John Paul Jones when I was a small boy at school. In the school "Reader" there was given the first chapter of Fenimore Cooper's novel "The Pilot." It stopped at a very interesting point, so I hunted up the complete novel. The career of John Paul Jones has made such a tremendous impression on the world that he not only can never be forgotten—such a thing is inconceivable—but he will reappear every now and then in the newspapers. And I think when one sees his name, one has a suddenly awakened curiosity.

Jones named his ship the Bon Homme Richard, because Franklin, then in France, succeeded in getting the ship for him, and Jones gave it that name as a compliment to his benefactor. Franklin knew a man when he saw one. Jones' one speech is immortal; though I am not sure whether he said, "I have only begun to fight" or "I have not yet begun to fight." Either version will do very well.

Jones died in 1792, only 45 years old. He was buried on July 20, and it is perhaps fitting that after so stormy a career he should have been buried in the midst of a great revolution. The place was then a cemetery set apart for foreigners, but is now the site of a biscuit factory. Here his body lay until 1905, and no one knew for over a century where his grave was. In 1899 the United States Embassy in Paris began to look for it; and in 1905 found it. Houses had to be destroyed, underground tunnels had to be made, and on April 15, 1905, only a yard and a half under ground, the lead coffin was discovered. It was taken to Annapolis by the American cruiser Brooklyn and there reburied with full naval honors.

Hell-Bent For Election

James P. Warburg Summarizes His Many Reasons Why He Dislikes Roosevelt And All His New Deal Works.

James P. Warburg, formerly one of the economic advisers of President Roosevelt, who appointed him financial adviser to American delegation to the World Economic Conference in 1933, has written an appraisal of the New Deal, the final chapter of which appears today. These articles do not necessarily reflect the editorial opinion of The Post. They are presented as an authoritative and penetrating analysis. These articles will soon appear under the title, "Hell-Bent for Election," in book form from the press of Doubleday, Doran Co., Garden City, N. Y.

X—Conclusion.

By James P. Warburg.

AT the beginning of these articles I defined the basis of appraisal, upon which I was going to try to tell you as simply and as convincingly as possible why I for one do not think Mr. Roosevelt should be reelected President of the United States.

In the preceding chapters I have set forth my reasons for thinking:

1. That Mr. Roosevelt, as President, carried out a few of the less important promises he made when a candidate for that office; that he failed to carry out a far greater number of the more important, and that he fulfilled in very large measure the promises that had been made by the Socialist candidate, Norman Thomas.

2. That Mr. Roosevelt's present purpose is to give the Nation "a more abundant life" by first vesting in a central Federal bureaucracy headed by himself complete dictatorial powers over all the factors that affect the economic and social life of the Nation, and, second, using these powers to produce, by executive management, "the more abundant life."

That this is a purpose to which we cannot subscribe, because:

(a) To accomplish this purpose means to substitute for the American form of government a central "authoritarian" state, along the lines of the various European experiments in socialism and dictatorship, and because,

(b) The hope that, by thus sacrificing our traditional freedom, we shall attain "a more abundant life," is a vain and foolish hope, as no one has more cogently pointed out than Mr. Roosevelt himself, at the time when he was Governor of New York.

3. That Mr. Roosevelt's actions taken to accomplish the avowed purposes have been largely ineffective; and that, where they have been temporarily effective, their temporary usefulness has been outweighed by their disproportionate cost.

4. That Mr. Roosevelt's individuality is such as to make him an ineffective and dangerous man to have in the White House, because his actions and intellectual processes are too greatly dominated by his emotions, and because his emotional drive is primarily an inordinate desire for popularity.

• • • •

THAT is my story. Those are my convictions. The reader must take them, modify them, or leave them, to suit herself or himself.

If you agree with me in whole or in large measure, you may or may not agree with my conclusion that barring an extreme radical or an extreme reactionary, almost any citizen of integrity would be better to have in the White House than Mr. Roosevelt.

But, whether you agree or not, this much, I think, is clear:

Mr. Roosevelt has definitely determined the issue on which he must go to the country next year. He has definitely determined that the issue shall be whether or not we want to abandon the home rule principle, States' rights and the fundamental concept of our constitutional democracy, in order to make a try for "the more abundant life" by setting up a bureaucratic dictatorship of "master minds" in Washington.

He has definitely asked us to decide whether we agree with Governor Roosevelt, who in 1930 condemned such an attempt, or with President Roosevelt, who, in 1935 recommends it.

Whether or not Mr. Roosevelt admits this to be the issue matters not the least. His actions and his recent utterances can leave not the slightest room for doubt.

Bear in mind that highly significant speech about the farmer "being a lord on his own farm."

Bear in mind the "horse and buggy" attack upon the NRA decision.

Bear in mind the unconstitutional removal without cause of Commissioner Humphrey from the Federal Trade Commission, because "You will, I know, realize that your mind and my mind do not go along together on either the policies or the administering of the Federal Trade Commission, and, frankly, I think it is best for the people of this country that I should have a full confidence."

• • • •

BEAR in mind the Administration-sponsored bill to withdraw from citizens the right to obtain through the courts whatever damages they suffer through the devaluation of the dollar.

Bear in mind the Administration-sponsored effort to have Congress pass a law making it impossible for citizens to recover moneys paid under a tax, in the in the event that such tax should later be held unconstitutional.

And don't ever forget that remarkably frank letter to Chairman Hill, in which the President expressed the hope that Congress would not let "any doubts as to the constitutionality, however reasonable, stand in the way of the proposed legislation.

If Mr. Roosevelt says that this is not the issue, that he is only trying to save the American order from itself, that reelecting him is the only way to prevent revolution, and so forth and so on—I for one shall only smile.

Not because I shall not think he believes what he is saying.

Not because I shall doubt his much discussed "sincerity."

But because I know that Mr. Roosevelt can make himself believe what he wants to believe, think what he wants to think, and remember what he wants to remember.

Because I know that in talking to a conservative he wants—really wants—to be a conservative; and that in talking to a radical he wanted to show him that he knew more about redistributing wealth than the late Senator Long.

Because I know, in other words, that there is only one real driving force in Mr. Roosevelt, and that is the desire to be liked and admired by the greatest possible number of people.

That is why I have given this series of articles the somewhat flippant title: "HELL BENT FOR ELECTION."

Crude Oil Stocks Drop During Week

By the Associated Press.

Crude oil stocks were reported yesterday by Petroleum Administrator Ickes to have totaled 308,881,000 barrels at the end of the week of September 7, compared with 309,976,000 on August 31.

Domestic crude stocks fell 1,199,000 barrels while foreign stocks rose 104,000 barrels.

Reports from the industry indicated crude production was somewhat lower for the week and runs to stills fell off appreciably. The daily average crude output was about 2,725,000 barrels, 5,000 below the previous week's average. Crude runs to stills averaged 2,655,000 barrels, a decline of around 100,000 barrels.

Crude imports averaged 111,000 barrels, against 82,000 for the week of August 31.

Arts Board Approves Tablets for New Bridge

Approval by the Fine Arts Commission of four tablets for the new Calvert street bridge was announced yesterday by Secretary H. P. Caemmerer. Symbolizing highway, air and water transportation, the tablets will be placed two on each side of the span, which is to be dedicated his fall. They were designed by Leon Hermant, Philadelphia sculptor.

Landscape plans for Folger, Montrose and Franklin parks have been approved, Caemmerer declared. The commission still has under consideration designs of murals intended for the Justice and Postoffice departments' buildings and of a statue of Benjamin Franklin which will be set up in the Postmaster General's office.

John Marshall

By

Max Lerner

THIS YEAR marks the centenary of John Marshall's death. Thus far, our only commemoration has been the Schechter decision, in which the Supreme Court paid its greatest member the dubious honor of turning its back on his tradition of judicial pationalism . . .

Marshall . . . had the advantage of working with the course of history. He had vision enough to see that political power had to be coterminous with the scale of economic activity. He saw it only dimly, and it was obscured in his mind by a hatred of States' rights and of the common man, and by a protective obsession about the rights of property. But his historical meaning for us lies none the less in this dim insight of his. The position of his opponents, such as Jefferson and John Taylor, embodied an archaic economic vision, whatever the merits of their political views . . . If, instead of following a policy of States'-rights obstructionism, they had come out frankly for national legislative control of the developing industrial system, Marshall's much vaunted nationalism would quickly have changed to a different tune. What it amounted to was aid and tolerance for business enterprise, both of them on a national scale.

AS American capitalism developed it was inevitable that the mere absence of restraint over private property should no longer be adequate to resolve the deepening contradictions of economic life. In the search for new methods of economic control through the Federal Government, Marshall's judicial nationalism proved a memorable instrufment. The Marshall technique of interpretation became a tradition that created new uses not only for the commerce power, but for the taxing and spending power of Congress as well. It is this technique which, since the 1870's, has formed one facet of judicial liberalism. And it was upon the continuation of this technique that the Administration laid its hope for the New Deal legislation . . .

But the important question, as we have since learned, is not whether the Court could if it would interpret the commerce clause broadly enough to validate legislative control of industry, but whether it would if it could. And to explain its unwillingness we have to go back to Marshall as surely as we do when we wish to explain its competence. Marshall's class interest took to forms in his own thinking: the doctrine of the vested rights of property, and the doctrine of judicial nationalism. Each of these has given rise to a tradition that has been followed in the later history of the Court, the first principally by the conservatives, the second principally by the liberals. And it need scarcely be added that the dominant one has been not the broad interpretation of the Constitution in the interests of Federal jurisdiction over industry, but the setting up of the Supreme Court as the guardian of the vested interests. In Marshall's thought, in the period of a rising capitalism, these two streams could flow together smoothly and feed each other. But the movement of economic events has caused a deepening cleavage between them.

Today, in a period of capitalist crisis, to follow Marshall's vested-rights tradition means to entrench further the hegemony of big ownership; to follow his tradition of judicial nationalism means for a time to salvage capitalism, but to salvage it by stripping it of some of its powers, and, more important, it means to maintain tolerable standards of wages and working conditions. Today, even more than in Marshall's time, the issue is one between national control of business enterprise and no control at all . . .

• • • •

FOR the liberals on the Court this was no easy choice. Nor did they make it as a deliberate preference for the interest of business enterprise. And here, for explanation, we must turn to another element in Marshall's thought—that of constitutionalism, the supremacy of sanctity of the Constitution and of the Supreme Court as its exclusive interpreter and guardian. A potential liberal minority on the Court, far removed from a defense of reactionary capitalism, is none the less fearful of what may lie ahead in the unexplored vistas of hitherto unparalleled Federal control of industry. And they find nothing to fall back upon except an austere constitutionalism and Marshall's doctrine of judicial supremacy. Like Marbury vs. Madison, the Hot Oil and Schechter decisions express (for some of the justices) a jealousy of the executive power, and the insistence of the judiciary that it alone can apportion powers among Government departments. That is the meaning of the contentions about the delegation of congressional powers to the Executive. Unfortunately, the Court liberals do not see that the constitutionalism which they regard as the safeguard of the polity is, in the hands of the Court majority, not the expression of a tortured and sensitive conscience, but a stubborn defense of the status quo . . .

Thus, there are three Marshalls alive today—a hundred years after his death: the Marshall of expanded national power; the Marshall of the protection of the vested interest, and the Marshall of a sacred constitutional fetishism. And it is the great irony of his place in the campaign of history that the last two have combined to kill their brother.

Reprinted, in part, from an article by Max Lerner, lecturer in the department of government at Harvard University, from the current issue of the New Republic, where it appears as a condensed version of Mr. Lerner's forthcoming book, an economic study of the Constitution.

The 8th WOMAN
HER ADVANTAGE OVER OTHERS

There used to be eight million sufferers every month. Today, a million women escape this regular martyrdom to pain. So, why be miserable—or even uncomfortable? Be that eighth woman who lets Midol carry her serenely through those difficult days!
Midol is a tiny tablet, white and tasteless, and quite safe for anyone to take. A merciful medicine which specialists recommend for this very purpose. It is not a narcotic.
This truly remarkable medicine is taken any time, preferably just before the expected pain. This precaution often avoids the pain altogether. But Midol is effective even when the pain has caught you unaware and has reached its height. It is effective for hours, so two tablets should carry you through your worst day.
Remember, the smallest degree of relief you might get from Midol means a great deal to your comfort.
If you are now a periodic sufferer, why not become that eighth woman who escapes this recurring pain and discomfort? Address a card, now, to Midol, 170 Varick St., New York, and receive a trial box postpaid.

New Faces and Novel Musical Tricks on Way

Thumbnail Previews of Ace Film Plays Coming to Four Local Screens.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

The midsummer boasts of the cinema's enthusiastic entrepreneurs that this would prove the greatest of all "greater movie seasons" seem in a fair way of being fulfilled.

Already the Capital has been privileged to enjoy a fine succession of celluloid charades, many of which are still parading across the screens of Washington's downtown, first-run sector—"Anna Karenina," "Alice Adams," "Top Hat," "Steamboat Round the Bend," "Annapolis Farewell," "The Loves of a Dictator" and others that might be catalogued—and a fine list lies just ahead.

The most torrential downpour since Father Noah laid the keel of his refuge for the maritime menagerie that made its first pitch on Mount Ararat, having converted what was supposed to have been a sun, sand and sea period of rehabilitation into a more or less shivery indoor interval of pseudo-convalescence—it all sounds a good deal more serious than it really was—your reporter found himself screen-gazing a great deal of the time these past two or three weeks.

He, therefore, is pretty well caught up on his night work and able to look ahead a little, with something a bit firmer than hearsay and imagination upon which to base a few casual thumbnail appraisals of pictures that local moviegoers soon will see.

High Standard Set.

Not all are masterpieces, but none is sufficiently on the minus side to justify its being ignored as an offering of no merit.

Some of them reveal surprising performances by players from whom they might be least expected; in combination, they afford impressive proof of unsuspected versatility on the part of certain artists popularly supposed to be strictly "type players."

All in all, they are a worthy lot of films, as I shall endeavor, in a slightly bewildered way, to make plain, viz., and to wit:

"DIAMOND JIM." An authentic, colorful and picturesque recapturing of the modes and moods of those mellowly mauve decades that preceded, marked and followed the turn of the century, with an amazingly realistic depiction by Edward Arnold of the bejeweled figure of the colossal gourmand who rose from the lowly post of station master at Spuyten Duyvil to be known as Broadway's greatest playboy. Such anachronisms as are apparent in this production are discoverable in the lines, rather than in action, costumes, customs or settings. Modern slang slips into the conversation of a day in which it was not known a little too often. Slightly exaggerated treatment of a few of the more melodramatic incidents in James Buchanan Brady's life—his testing of the steel passenger coach he had invented for the railroads, for instance—and an interesting sidelight upon the lives and characters of many celebrated personalities this generation knows only as vague legends are shown. One of the most agreeable surprises the picture offers is the easy assumption of the role of Lillian Russell by Binnie Barnes. Eric Blore, George Sidney, Jean Arthur, in a dual role; Robert McWade, Robert Emmett O'Connor and scores more contribute "bits" ranging from a glimpse of the young John L. Sullivan, as a bouncer in a garish Broadway honky-tonk, to the suave Albert Conti as a jewelry salesman slightly aghast at the size of Diamond Jim's orders. There is a blending of fiction and fact here that makes for rich, robust and, at times, slightly rowdy entertainment. It has been a hit everywhere it has been shown.

"THE CALL OF THE WILD." To the Jack London epic of a dog that reverted to type has been added here an adventurous, convincing and at all times vigorous close-up of the Klondike Gold Rush, with a little touch of romance on the side. This is two-fisted, quick-trigger melodrama in the Alaskan wilds that possesses a quality of tumultuous honesty that somehow transcends the counterfeit make-believe of the southern California sand dunes, so often made to serve as snow. The greatest actor in the picture is a magnificent St. Bernard dog, "Buck," to which is intrusted the thread of Jack London's story that is kept unbroken, even if subordinated to the romantic and covetous rivalries participated in by Clark Gable, Jack Oakie, Loretta Young, Reginald Owen, Frank Conroy, Sidney Toler, Katherine De Mille and the numerous other members of a large cast that carries the action from civilization to the wilds and back again. Those who never have liked outdoor melodramas before will like this one—and "Buck" won't be the least of the reasons.

"SHE MARRIED HER BOSS." Claudette Colbert, Melvyn Douglas and Michael Bartlett may be the ostensible stars of this picture, but the really stellar performance is contributed by a child actress who is the most lovable little brat that ever lived. Most of the time the spectator's major aim in life is to obtain an opportunity to take this small minx out and kill her to death, but in the end her exceptional performance of an extremely difficult assignment compels an acknowledgment of her juvenile precocity. The story is cut to formula. It is the trite-told tale of the efficient secretary who marries her boss and attempts a complete revolution of his domestic establishment, much to the chagrin of a sister-housekeeper and the consternation of the small daughter of an earlier marriage of her daddy's—a very unhappy one, by implication. The story is stereotyped, but not too much so for interest in its eaerly sequences. It goes pretty thoroughly haywire toward the end. When the department store owner, his reconciled bride and the branch manager with whom she had planned a long trip, stand out in front of the boss' main establishment and heave bricks through the show windows and then easily evade the cops, I submit that legitimate drama is being given a pretty swift kick in the pants. There is, however, a good deal of fun before you get to that point. And that kid actress is no less than immense.

"HERE COMES THE BAND." For those who have been awaiting a new and novel utilization of music as an aid to plot development, this is precisely what the doctor would have ordered, had he been asked to order anything. Perhaps the trouble with it is that it is too new and novel to coincide with the dramatic requirements of those who insist upon an inexorable and relentless logic in the fabrication of their stage and screen tales. There is little enough of this in the formulation of the romantic story that has its inception 'way back in the days of the Great War and then moves to Park Avenue and the taxi stands in New York. But to get back to the musical treatment, here is a film play in which music is the entire plot. Its central character is a young plainsman who comes to New York to try to do something with a fine baritone voice. His first triumph is at an amateur broadcast that is a comedy panic. He also has composed some songs. The best of these is pirated by a shrewd Broadway publisher who rakes in thousands from its sale as the most popular hit of the day. How the author proves his authorship constitutes the novel, even if slightly unbelievable, part of the dramatic structure. It is in this subject that Ted Lewis and his band make their screen debut, which is not so important as that in the person of Harry Stockwell, a fine new voice and a natural and likeable personality come to the screen. Virginia Bruce is the romantic heroine of the piece and Ted Healy and Nat Pendleton the comedians. Recommended unreservedly for the music and comedy lovers; with reservations for the drama lovers.

There are a few more new releases these eyes have seen, but they had better wait at least until they heave into view on the edge of the local horizon.

This fall's early surge of new features is making it very definitely evident that Reginald Owen is one of the most versatile actors appearing before the cameras and that on the distaff side Maureen O'Sullivan—who has been one of this column's favorite young actresses ever since her admirable work with Norma Shearer in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street"—is not far behind.

They both appeared with Garbo, the magnificent, in "Anna Karenina," in its recent second Garbo incarnation, both appear in support of Edmund Gwenn in the screen version of Walter Connolly's stage success, "The Bishop Misbehaves," which will be along to a Loew screen in due course, and Mr. Owen, of all things, is the "heavy"—otherwise, villain—in "The Call of the Wild."

This partially elaborates a statement made in the earlier paragraphs of these dispatches. And in case you think Lynne Overman is a one-type actor, remember him in "Men Without Names" and then look him over with Bing Crosby, Joan Bennett, Mary Boland and Ernest Cossart in "Two for Tonight"—when it gets here and you have two for tonight, that is.

So-This-Is-Paris Note.

So this is what you call columning is it? It's all a little new to me, but I hope to get the hang of it in time. That will place a bit of a strain on you—especially since, by this time, you have been accustomed to erudite comments on the theater by the Gross every day.

And it would be gross ingratitude on my part not to express something of the debt I owe "Jerry" for leaping in between these column rules when the need was great.

I'll be seeing you around, I'm afraid.

Belasco

"THE MAN WHO KNEW TOO MUCH." Gaumont-British picturization of a story by Charles Bennett and D. B. Wyndham Lewis, adapted to the screen by Edwin Greenwood and A. R. Rawlinson, featuring Leslie Banks, Edna Best and Peter Lorre. Directed by Alfred Hitchcock. Previewed Thursday, September 12, by Gerald G. Gross.

Once in a while "The Man Who Knew Too Much" exercises a hair-shirt scratch, making one fidget slightly in one's seat, but these defections are so few and the picture's merits are so many that to begin a review thus is pure quibbling.

As we just intimated, there are so many good points—an authentically staged concert scene in Albert Hall, the auspicious Washington debut of Peter Lorre, clever comedy situations and a gun battle reminiscent of "Two Gun" Crowley's last stand in New York several years ago, to mention the best ones—that this third of the Belasco's 1935-36 attractions adds up to decidedly worthwhile entertainment.

Surely, one of the homeliest feature players in pictures with his fleshy face and hyena eyes, Peter Lorre exhibits true promise as a character actor of the Laughton-Jannings-La Rue school. In comparing his physical appearance to that of Karloff's in "Frankenstein," as we did last Friday, after having previewed "The Man Who Knew Too Much," we hope there were no inferences that the screen types of Karloff and Lorre are similar. Actually, they are quite different, the one excelling as an unearthly monster, while the other projects his particular brand of terror in ordinary human guise.

Mr. Banks the Victim.

Leslie Banks, not Lorre, is "The Man Who Knew Too Much." Cast as a London gentleman with wife and daughter, he comes into possession of information which, if turned over to police authorities, would frustrate the plot of a ring led by Abbott (Lorre) to assassinate a high government officer.

The young daughter (Nova Pilbeam) is kidnaped to insure the father's silence. Seeking only the safe return of the girl, and indifferent to the fact that an official's life also hangs in the balance, Banks sets out with a friend, played by Hugh Wakefield, the "Director Arvelle" of "My Heart Is Calling," to find the gang's hideout.

He succeeds. But both men are trapped. Wakefield escapes with the information theh assassination is scheduled for that evening in Albert Hall. The distraught wife goes to the concert. She knows that if she attmpts to balk the murder, her daughter's life will be forfeit.

So What Happens?

And that, we think, is as far as we should go—except to add that the concert hall scene is splendid, not entirely due to the acting of Edna Best; that there is a dandy scene in which the two amateur detectives sing warnings to each other at a "cult" meeting and that the gun battle which brings the picture to a close is thrilling, though perhaps not so much so as similar duels you may have seen.

Banks, Lorre and Wakefield are top notch in their respective parts. Whether or not Lorre is destined to be another Laughton or Jannings cannot be foretold by this single characterization, which exerts no great strain upon his talents.

Gayety

"BON TON GIRLS." Independent Burlesque Association production in two acts and 29 scenes, with Billy Arlington, Scottie Friedell, Eddie Lloyd, Brownie Sick, Charlie Kane, Buddy and Ollie LaFond, Jean Rose, Toots Brawner Alexianna, Marie Allely, Dolores Shaw, Nazarra Hallo, and the Dancing Bryanettes. Book by Gus Faig. Dances routined by Frank Bryant. Staged by James J. Lake. Reviewed Sunday matinee by W. A. Whitney.

All's right with the show world now—yesterday the sun shone brightly on Kentucky Colonel James Joseph Lake's home of mirth and pulchritude, inaugurating the 1935-36 season of bigger and better burlesque at the Gayety Theater.

With a creditable complement of principals, the "Bon Ton Girls" offers a burlesque show which should go far toward satisfying the patrons' pent-up demands after a summer of darkness.

True, the comedy sketches are time-worn and the performance of the display artistes offer slight variations on the well-known theme, yet, the show moves with speed and enthusiasm.

While the entire company—the "Dancing Bryanettes," as well as the principals—offer a consistent and thoroughly enjoyable entertainment, certain of the principals occasionally stand out from their fellows.

Principals Who Score.

Plump Billy Arlington, whose ebullience never seems to wane, scores a decisive hit with his music number, with Brownie Sick as his foil. Eddie Lloyd, with his tramp dance and the really burlesqued routine (with Marie Allely) of a ten-cents-a-dance venture, is a smash hit. That Nazarra Hallo, in her second-act appearance, was insistently called out for eight encores is more eloquent appraisal of her work than can be put into this space in cold words and colder type. Of Alexianna, little more need be said than that, in her silver-paint routine (and to only lesser extent in her other two numbers), she repeats her signal success of last season—and then some!

Upholding the accepted traditions of torrid tantalizers, besides Miss Hallo, are Oolores Shaw, Miss Allely and Toots Brawner—who this week makes her Washington debut—all of whom are very wholeheartedly accepted. Jean Rose does the soprano warbling.

On The Air Today

Uncle George's first gift of 100 or more radio receiving sets for worthy hospitals and institutions probably will go to a group of 20 men stricken with tuberculosis.

Uncle George (George Wasserman, president of George's Radio Co.) announced Sunday through The Post and WOL's kiddie show, conducted by Joe Brown, that he had the radio sets available for distributoin to public institutions and homes not fully equipped with radio receivers. The sets are in splendid condition — reconditioned after being traded in for new models.

"We are writing you in the hopes that our letter will get due consideration in the distribution of radios as announced in The Washington Post," says the letter from ward 1, Tuberculosis Hospital, Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest. "We haven't a radio in the ward and would appreciate having one very much."

And the letter is signed by each man in the ward—a round robin of hope and the first opportunity offered Uncle George to make the lives of thousands, perhaps, brighter and happier because of radio entertainment this fall and winter.

* * * *

If you know of an old person's home or a hospital or an orphans' home or some such worthy institution needing a radio receiver—send your suggestion to The Post Radio Editor—or to George's Radio Co. And listen each Sunday afternoon at 2:30 to Joe Brown's kid show for details of presentation of the sets.

Art Godfrey and Arch McDonald will soon greet their radio friends over the footlights of the Fox Theater. Announcement has just been made by Carter T. Barron and Gene Ford of a Godfrey-McDonald date for early October. The boys will be backed up with several "name" acts now being auditioned in New York. Impresario Ford will build the stage show. Godfrey will present his orchestra and McDonald will do some commenting on sports matters. All in all, it should be a big week at the Fox.

A friend of Jimmy Farrell, gone from Washington about a year now in his conquest of New York's radio heights, phones to say that Farrell is beginning a new Tuesday (6:15 p. m.) series for CBS. WJSV can not carry the quarter-hour because of previous commitments for the time. However, Farrell's time changes October 3 to Thursdays at 6:15 and what with the change from daylight time, he may be heard through WJSV. He also sings with Patti Chapin, beginning October 1, Tuesdays, at 7:15 p. m.

Government Accountant Found Dead in Hotel

Alexander Young, 51, an accountant with the Department of Federal Communications, was found dead in his room in a New York Hotel, officials announced yesterday. Physicians said death was due to acute indigestion.

Mr. Young went to Manhattan on an investigation about a month ago. He had been with the department less than two months.

His body was discovered by Parks Dugan, a fellow worker. Mr. Young was married and lived in California.

HELPFUL HINTS FOR THE BUSY HOUSEWIFE!

Interesting Ways to Use Bread

Ever since bakers have made bread comparable to the home-made variety, the housewife has found that it can be served in new and varied ways instead of merely having it sliced at the table or made into sandwiches.

Breakfast

Let's not overlook the possibilities for using bread when planning the family breakfast. Instead of usual buttered toast, let's relieve the monotony by serving piping hot crisp French Toast. Breakfast Egg in Cases are unusual and give the everyday breakfast a festive air.

French Toast

2 eggs 3 slices bread
4 tbsps. milk ¼ tsp. salt

Beat eggs slightly, add salt and milk. Slice bread and remove crusts or not as desired. Cut slices in two, dip in egg mixture and fry until brown and crisp in plenty of fat in a frying pan or in deep fat. Serve with syrup, jelly or just dusted with powdered sugar.

Breakfast Eggs in Cases

Cut small loaves of day-old white bread into slices about 1½ to 2 inches thick. Trim off the crusts, and with a sharp knife hollow out each case, leaving a wall and a bottom ¼ inch or more. Dot the inside with butter and break one or more eggs in each case; season with salt and pepper. Allow one case for each person and place in a shallow pan; bake in a moderate oven (325—350° F.)—no warmer, and allow the bread to toast slowly and the egg to set, fully 20 minutes. Serve hot with crisp bacon or sausages and sprinkling of parsley. NOTE: Both eggs and toasted cases are eaten. Break down toasted case with fork and eat the egg and the toast together.

And may we suggest that you use

Latest Styles Call for Gems Of Rich Design

By Ruth Anne Davis.

GLITTERING lame, soft deep velvets, metallic silver and gold cloth — these are the fabrics which will be featured this winter for afternoon and evening wear. Their elegance is in keeping with the new vogue for the romance and color of the Renaissance which is sweeping the fashion world.

To lighten the somber effect of these rich fabrics, and to emphasize their exotic qualities, it is important that one wear jewelry. And it must be the right kind of jewelry, specially created with the new frocks in mind. Barbaric splendor and medieval richness is the keynote to this season's ornaments. Heavy imitation gold, dull silver, glittering Florentine crosses gleaming against soft velvets give the smart woman the appearance of a mysterious sixteenth century princess.

A local store has some samples of the new jewelry which will make your fingers itch. Bracelets, earrings, necklaces, and clips of gilt and imitation precious stones are made up in novel and Paris inspired designs. One flexible bracelet comes in a metal gilt interspersed with blue, red, or topaz stones. A circular clip comes in matching stones and design. Both cost $1.

A stunning necklace is made in the form of a double strand of shining topaz or crystal drops, connected by tiny gold links. It is fastened with a dainty bronze clasp, whose delicate chasing is reminiscent of the fine tracery in Italian cathedrals. This necklace has a bracelet to match made of five strings of stones, fastened by a barbaric gilt clasp.

Lifetime Manicure Cases.

SPECIAL! Special! A manicure case which has all the necessities for lovely nails is on sale at a downtown store reduced from $2.50 to $1.25. The cover is made of genuine leather, guaranteed to last a lifetime. Inside are all the accoutrements required for conscientious care of the hands. An orange stick and nailfile, of course, and then some generous sized bottles of polish and remover. The polish is a well-known brand which will not dry up the nails and remove their valuable oils. There are also some handy little cotton wads for removal purposes. After the present contents of the box are exhausted, it should make an attractive sewing kit or jewel case.

A Lotion for the Eyes.

FRESHEN UP your eyes for fall! Weeks of exposure to the summer sun has probably left them red and strained looking. However, a well-known cosmetician has invented a grand lotion which is just the thing you need to give them that rested, lustrous appearance. Eyes should be bathed at least once a day, and sometimes even more frequently if they are very tired. It will also add greatly to one's appearance to freshen them up with an application of this lotion before going out in the evening. It costs only $1 a bottle.

Cream Box Attractive.

We recommend the handy little three-in-one cream box on sale at a downtown store. For the sum of $1 you can get in this box a cream for every purpose. First on the list comes a grand cleansing cream which is absolute death on dirt. Furthermore, it smooths and softens as it cleanses, leaving the skin with a satiny texture. Then there's a finishing cream which makes the powder and rouge stick like glue, and which also protects against exposure. Last, but not least, is a rich cream for overnight use. This keeps the skin smooth and soft and builds and nourishes the tissues.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 323, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Swagger Lines and Shorter Lengths Are Featured in Fall Daytime Gloves

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Full of vigor and the lusty spirit of blustering fall days, are fashion's choice of fall daytime gloves. Many types are approved . . . two are outstanding: the swagger glove with widely flared cuff (inspired by those English country gloves made for a hard-riding atmosphere)—and, second, short "little boy" gloves, often with the opening at the back of the hand.

This neat-as-a-pin short-length glove is worn by the lady in the sketch, because it's an important fashion development this fall. The pair sketched is of pigskin, with the new back fastening and bold wooden buttons.

Widely flared cuffs add a dash to many of this season's gloves. We've sketched a 4-button pull-on, with the new French dip in the flare. This, too, illustrates the general tendency toward shorter glove lengths.

Pigskin, Capeskin and Doeskin Among Favored Materials.

Many of the new gloves have snugged-in wrists (to keep chill breezes on the outside!). Sometimes this effect is achieved by lastex shirring (see sketch) . . . sometimes by a snug, all-around wrist strap.

To accent the first fall days, many fashion knowers will wear gloves featuring color . . . rust, wine, dark green and some chamois color. Gloves boasting these lovely shades come in knitted fabrics, in velveteen (these can be teamed up with a matching velveteen beret, scarf or belt), and in kidskin and suede pull-ons. They will tie up with handbag and hosiery colors, too.

As to materials: Fashion likes pigskin and capeskin and doeskin . . . rugged leathers that lend themselves to the stitching and spirited styling demanded these days by the outdoor-loving woman.

Thursday: Suntanned complexions can bleach gracefully.

'Fluffy Effects' To Rule Winter Coiffure Vogue

SWIRLS, CURLS, and fluffy effects around the forehead will be the keynote of smart coiffures this winter, according to Emile, Washington hairdresser who has recently returned after a summer spent spent abroad studying the latest trends in this line.

Coiffures this season are being designed primarily with the new hats in mind, according to Emile. The prevailing tendency in bonnets is an off-the-forehead sweep which leaves the front of the hair exposed. Emphasis is concentrated on the brow, which will be adorned with curly, fluffy strands.

The back of the head, in contrast, is left comparatively simple. The rows and rows of waves so popular a year ago have given way to simple, swirled effects, which may be varied occasionally by a series of small curls at the base of the hairline.

The new hats show the neckline as well as the forehead, and this will be trim and cut short this year, says Emile. The two most popular arrangements, he predicts, will be a natural swirl over the back, with curls clustered on the side or little ringlets rising in neat rows above the neckline.

Simple, natural effects, rather than artificiality, are being featured this year. Stiff, set waves have given way to loose, fluffy arrangements, which transform the most demure young girl and the most serious-minded woman into frivolous flibberty-gibbets.

Emile is very much excited about the great vogue for hair ornaments which has taken Paris by storm. Flowers, both natural and artificial, and varying from single buds tucked high in one's curls to more elaborate arrangements, will be seen everywhere in the evening. Rhinestone clips and drops and regal tiaras tipped with pearls are also good this year.

Collecting Will Help Student Absorb Worth-While Knowledge

Selection Depends on Interest of Child, but Parents Should Encourage Choice of Article That Lends Itself to Use.

The following article is one of a series on home activities for children appearing Tuesdays and Saturdays on the Woman's Page. Mrs. Bartlett, the author, is active in progressive education circles.

By Lenore K. Bartlett.

COLLECTIONS are fascinating to young and old. From President Roosevelt with his famous stamp and ship model collections down to the small boy with a pocket full of small odds and ends, we all collect "things." Stamps seem to be universally intriguing and because there are always new stamps being made, they usually sustain interest indefinitely. Each person will choose his own collection according to his individual interests, and children are especially versatile in this respect. Nature is usually interesting to most children.

One child I heard of tells a year-round story of trees in his collection. He takes the first buds in the spring. A little later he obtains a partly opened leaf and follows this with a full-grown leaf. Then the berries or seeds or the acorn from the oak. Later in the fall the leaves may turn to gorgeous hues from the forest. These with a piece of the bark and a cross-section of a branch to show the grain, he mounts on a beaver board panel with small wire fastenings. In this way he has the annual development of a number of common trees.

MRS. BARTLETT

Washington is particularly fortunate in the number and variety of wild flowers available in its parks. Remember the old-fashioned herbarium with its dried leaves and flowers? My grandmother made her collection among the leaves of the family Bible. In those days the fad was often merely a collection of artistic or beautiful pages. Today the intelligent collector seeks knowledge with the mere accumulation. He wants to know where each species of flower or leaf originated; what are the other plants of the same family and how they propagate. It is smart these days to create a real collection and to follow through with the facts and information.

Costume Dolls Typical.

Costume dolls of various countires are typical of this newer, educational type of collecting. Comparison of the dress worn, the habits and climatic conditions reflected in the type of apparel serve to integrate the child's knowledge and can be tide up with his studies at school. If your youngster doesn't seem to be doing very well in his history or georgraph, try such a method of arousing his real interest in what he is attempting to learn. For the young son who needs this type of assistance, models or pictures of trains in various countries or other types of vehicles used might be more appropriate than dolls.

Rock specimens, shells, insects, coins, photos, Indian relics, china animals, bottles, flags, maps, covers of paper matches are all possibilities. Of course, the selection of the collection depends upon the interests of the child, but if it is up to you to make a suggestion, try to foster one which lends itself to use.

A paper match collection may fall within the latter class. One child amassed hundreds of different covers. Friends sent them to her from all over the country. Match companies were also accommodating. To preserve her collection this child pasted onto a plain cardboard wastebasket, afterward applying a coat of shellac. The mere collection then had not only artistic value, but the finished product was of definite use.

A Mother's Experience.

The following account of a mother's experience in helping her children use their leisure was inspired by Mrs. Bartlett's articles:

Thomas, 7, and Ila, 5, decided they wanted to have a carnival. This decision made on Thursday morning was scheduled for Saturday afternoon. The children wrote their announcement cards, which they distributed in the block to their friends, children of all ages. One safety pin was signified as the price of admission. Thomas is making a collection of safety pins, so of course he was elated when the invited individuals appeared 20 strong.

Curious attractions included an old canary stand with a bell tied in its center to be rung when hit by a ball, a teddy bear perched upon a large box waiting to be knocked over, holes in a board through which bean bags were to be thrown, a tall ladder for jumping and boxing gloves hung invitingly beside an improvised ring. The real thrill of the evening was offered by the old baby carriage which gave the rides of this gay occasion.

Penny prizes, bought by Thomas from the money he had made from his vegetable sales on Saturday morning, were the compensation for the lucky winners.

One hour chucked with joy and the accompanying noise that healthy, happy children can make with a lantern-lighted decorated back yard as the background was the trick that brought the adult neighbors peeping out to give vent unanimously to the thought, "Oh were I a child again!"

One hour of a mother's time and co-operation with her children that will yield beautiful memories to be carved as shades of a happy past into the unknown future.

ANITA J. ANDERSON.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

NO APOLOGIES are needed for a room that has a well lived-in look. That's proof enough of the success of the decorating. Some of the most delightful rooms are a little odd and endish and a bit down at the heel. But in getting that way they have acquired a lovable mellowness that can't be bought in a store.

• • • •

C. M. G. writes: Our living room is like Topsy—it jes' growed. It's a sweet old place, very hodge-podge and a little on the shabby side. Eventually we will get around to having the furniture covered but for the present we must manage with things about as they are except for new wall paper. Now the problem is to get something that will be fresh and give us a new lease on life and yet not make the old things look too shabby by contrast. We have an old rug of Oriental design, and in the furniture and draperies just about all the colors there are in deep, rather faded, tones now. We'd like to be daring and have wall paper that is somewhat different but are afraid that a simple indistinct pattern in cream or ivory would be the wisest thing. What would you suggest?

• • • •

Answer: Undoubtedly the misty patterns in ivory or buff would be the safest choice. But I don't think it would be taking too big a chance to venture into something a little different. There is a certain shade of apricot that would give a warm glow to the room without looking too new and fresh. Then there are certain softened greens and blues that would be pleasant and practical for the livingroom you have. Or what do you think of yellow walls? They have a sunshiny effect that should be very casual and charming in a mellowed old room.

Strictly Speaking

What Are the Errors in These?

1. "Every one of the girls were present."
2. "The painting harmonizes with it's surroundings."
3. "He is the oldest of the two brothers."
4. "It is an understanding between you and I."

Check Here.

1. The verb should be singular to agree with its subject "one."
2. "It's" with an apostrophe is a contraction of "it is." In this sentence the possessive form is needed. "Its" (without the apostrophe) should be used in this case.
3. The comparative, rather than the superlative, degree should be used when referring to two. The sentence should read, "He is the older of the two brothers."
4. "You and me" should be substituted for "you and I." Both pronouns are objects of the preposition.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Cultural Club Is Being Organized for Benefit of Washingtonians.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: The letter of "Diurnal" in your column of September 9, as well as other of the same type I have seen there from time to time make me feel certain their writers would like to know of a club now being organized to meet the social and cultural needs of a large number of persons in this city. This club will have a varied program, both of afternoon and evening activities.

• • • •

As secretary of the organization, I am now getting together the names of those who are interested, and the list is growing rapidly. The woman who is sponsoring this project is an educated and cultured person whose experience as teacher, social worker and world traveler has brought her a realization of the need of such an organization. The program will include musicales, entertaining lectures, dancing, bridge games and many other activities.

• • • •

Those interested may write for further information to Mrs. Winifred Baldwin at 1734 P street northwest. (Please do not telephone.)

Very truly yours,
(Mrs.) WINIFRED BALDWIN.

• • • •

DEAR MRS. BALDWIN: You have my best wishes for the success of this organization you describe. I have no doubt there are a great many persons in the city who could derive profit and pleasure from membership in such a club, and for that reason I am publishing your letter—hoping they may read it and get in touch with you. M. H.

Wants to Play Hockey.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I always read your column with a great deal of interest. Now I come to you with a problem of my own. For the last four years I played hockey in college and would like to play with some small Washington team this fall. However, I do not know whom to contact to secure information as to when I could practice, what days and if anyone is eligible. Any information you can give me will be deeply appreciated, Sincerely,

ANONYMOUS.

• • • •

DEAR ANONYMOUS: There is nothing in your letter which tells me whether you are boy or girl. However, I am guessing from your handwriting that you are the latter. Miss Maude Parker, director of women's and girl's activities of the District Department of Playgrounds, 313 District Building, can tell you all about the Washington Hockey Association. Membership is composed, for the most part, of college graduates. Members meet every Saturday afternoon during the season on the Ellipse field just south of the White House Grounds, for practice and play. Occasionally during the week there are late afternoon or evening meetings. You are eligible for membership, I believe; and you may be pleased to learn the season has not yet started. It commences about the time the colleges launch their fall semesters. Men who may be interested in affiliating with a local hockey club should make inquiry of Richard Tennyson, assistant supervisor of District playgrounds, in charge of men's and boys' activities. M. T.

Modern Furniture Hailed As Last Word in Comfort

Underwood & Underwood.

Mme. Marianna von Allesch, Pioneer in New Design, Says Its Simplicity and Restraint Provides Best Background.

By Frances Mangum.

THE WOMAN who wishes to appear to best advantage selects her home background with as much care as she does her costume or her make-up. The most flattering background she can have is that provided by the simplicity and restraint of modern furniture, Marianna von Allesch, pioneer in the field of modern art, believes.

"It's all quite logical," Mme. von Allesch smiled. "Take a lovely woman, for instance. Place her in a room with bright flowered drapes, a figured carpet, heavy carved tables, and a massive sofa. Who sees her? The eye is unconsciously attracted to other things. She is merely part of a design."

On the other hand, put her in a modern room where the colors and furniture are both restrained, and you see her. She is the detail.

"I have often seen it happen," she said, "that persons with very little personality, quite colorless individuals, took on unwonted charm against simple, tasteful backgrounds. They felt surer of themselves. And they unconsiously reacted favorably!"

An Analogy Is Drawn.

Mme. von Allesch compared modern furniture with a tailor made suit. "The beauty is not in the detail," she said, "but rather in the general form, balance, and line."

Mme. von Allesch became interested in art moderne in Germany in 1915. Before that she studied many phases of art all over Europe, and was tutor in an art school to Prince August Wilhelm, third son of the former Kaiser.

At one time she started a glass blowing factory with 14 men. Later she was engaged by the German government to study and industrialize the glass industry in Thuringen.

In 1928 she came to America, and it was then she helped introduce modern furniture and interiors to this country.

Need Governs Modern Furniture.

Mme. von Allesch sees modern furniture as an expression of the age.

"It was not born overnight of an extravagant artist," she said. "It has grown logically—and, therefore, it must stay. It is part and parcel of our everyday life.

"Values have changed. Nowadays most of us have less money to spend, less time to waste. We need homes that require little upkeep, that are convenient, and above all comfortable. Out of this need has grown modern furniture."

She explained that modern furniture is designed for comfort above all else.

"People have said to me that it is cold and severe," she explained. "That proves they really know nothing at all about it.

"As a matter of fact, to design a piece you must know quite a bit about the human body. You must know how the bones and muscles co-ordinate in order to have a chair, or sofa fit that body, and the body to fit it. When you sit down on a modern piece, you are almost forced to relax, and be comfortable. It was planned to make you do so."

Checks Up on Habits.

Mme. Von Allesch said that when persons asked her to plan the interior of their homes she always wanted to ascertain first their living habits, because the furniture itself, and the arrangement of it must suit them and their mode of life.

"For instance," she explained, "I want to know if they entertain frequently, if they dress for dinner, if there is a maid, or more servants, or if they live formally, or casually, what their habits are, if they like to sit in a corner and read, if they prefer to sit around in groups and talk. When I know these things, and many more, then I can proceed to arrange things for their comfort and convenience. Then I can bring out the best that is in modern furniture—and it can bring out the best in them."

Food We Eat Is Seldom Free From Bacteria

Recent Experiments Show Skin Can Rid Itself of Unwanted Germs.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

MOST of us live all our lives with bacteria of various sorts within the mouth and planted on the mucous membranes of the nose and throat. That there is probably no such thing as a mouth entirely free from germs is the conclusion of an English investigator who made an unsuccessful search for one.

Some years ago an attempt was made to feed newborn animals on perfectly sterile food, with the entire environment free from bacteria. The result was retarded growth which could be attributed to but one factor, namely, the lack of bacteria in the intestinal tract. So perhaps a mouth without some bacteria would be a peculiar place. The taste would probably be strange and food might even be unpalatable. Many foods derive their flavors from bacteria and their products, for example, several varieties of cheese.

Few Foods Free From Germs.

Mouth organisms live on food particles that cling to the tongue and lodge in the spaces between the teeth. There is no bacterial filter provided for the mouth other than the mucous membrane. This is in sharp contrast to the nasal air passages, where hairs and many folds of mucous lining form a stopping place for bacteria that otherwise would enter the lungs with the inspired air.

Few articles of food are sterile and the types of germs that we harbor daily within the mouth cavity probably number a hundred or more. Many of them, however, live for but a short time. One investigator rinsed his mouth with a solution containing millions of lactic acid bacilli and was unable to find more than a scant trace of them the next morning. It would appear, then, that the mouth contains numerous sorts of bacteria, to which it is accustomed, but rejects foreign invaders as soon as possible. The recent tests of Arnold and Stewart showed that bacteria have only a brief existence on many body surfaces; for example, those found on the normal mucous membrane of the nose disappear within a relatively short time. The skin, too, was found to possess the same power, namely, of ridding itself of unwanted bacteria.

Lips Are Seeding Ground.

In attempting to discover a practical method of sterilizing mouth thermometers Arnold and Stewart noted that bacteria on thermometers removed from the mouth occurred in profusion where the slender glass tube came in contact with the lips.

It has been shown that while saliva does not assist the growth of bacteria, neither does it have antiseptic properties. It functions nevertheless as a flushing agent and thus aids in their mechanical removal.

As with the mucous membrane of the nose, that of the mouth possesses sterilizing power. The cheeks and the area beneath the tongue are efficient bacteria killing surfaces, but the gums, the tongue itself, and the palate have little or no ability in this direction.

We may conclude, then, that the lips are the seeding grounds and that organisms are carried into the mouth by the licking action of the tongue. All of which emphasizes the value of good mouth hygiene, and particularly the thorough cleansing of eating utensils, drinking glasses, etc. It is useless to attempt to sterilize the mouth, however.

Now let some one devise a lipstick that is not only sterile but sure death to germs.

Today's Suggestions Offer Practical Ideas for Children's Lunches and Family Dinners

Nourishing Soup Ideal Basis For Student's Midday Meal

Prepared With Beef Foundation, It Provides All the Vegetables and Some of the Protein Needed for a Well Balanced Meal.

By Dorothea Duncan.

Every woman who has hungry children romping home from school at noon realizes that with the coming of fall midday meals again have assumed a greater importance. First of all, the meals must be warm and nourishing, but not so heavy that the child goes back to school sleepy instead of enlivened with increased energy for the afternoon's work. Then, too, noon meals for the school child must be ready promptly lest the child at the last moment swallow half his luncheon without proper chewing.

This means that simple luncheons that are easily prepared, served and eaten are best.

A filling soup can be made the basis for many an attractive fall luncheon menu. Such a soup, served with a crisp salad and a plain but substantial dessert like gingerbread, refrigerator cookies and fresh or stewed fruit, milk puddings or cereal desserts, makes a well-balanced meal.

Inexpensive vegetable soups prepared with a beef foundation provide all the vegetables and some of the protein for a well balanced meal. To make this type of soup, a shank bone is simmered gently in salted water until the meat is tender. The meat is cut from the bone and returned in small pieces to the cup along with assorted vegetables. A small piece of bay leaf, a bunch of herbs, a couple of cloves, some celery tops, or a teaspoon of Worcestershire will add greatly to the flavor.

A ham shank, with navy beans and a dash of horseradish, makes another marvelous combination, as does a veal shank with celery, carrots and noodles.

Chowders of milk soups with bits of bacon or salt pork, and plenty of corn and potatoes or mixed vegetables is another excellent selection.

One-Dish Lunches.

One-dish combinations that are just as easy and attractive and are ready for immediate service upon the arrival of the children are suggested for the family who does not like soup.

Try something like this in your casserole: Lima beans and tomatoes with bacon strips across the top; escalloped corn with browned sausages or frankfurters cut into strips; rice baked with left-over ground meat, a little onion and plenty of tomato, or noodles served with cheese and tomato sauce or en casserole with left-over chopped ham or veal.

Bacon and Lima Bean Casserole.

2 cups dry lima beans
2 cups tomatoes
6 strips bacon
Salt and pepper to taste
1 slice onion

Soak lima beans over night, then allow to simmer slowly in water to cover until they are tender. Add tomatoes, onion, salt and pepper to taste and place in a casserole with strips of bacon over the top. Bake for 45 minutes in a moderate oven. The tomatoes should be partly absorbed by the beans. Serves 5 to 6.

Hamburg Vegetable Soup.

¾ to 1 pound hamburg
2 cups each canned tomato and potato
2 medium carrots diced, or 1 cup left-over cooked carrot
½ cup diced celery
1 medium sized onion
2 teaspoons salt
¼ cup rice or barley
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1½ quarts water

Put all ingredients in large kettle, add water and simmer slowly ¾ to 1 hour. Serve with toast or crackers as the main dish for luncheon. Serves 4.

Worth Trying

Unusual Hamburger Recipe May Win Mix-Master for Your Kitchen.

Who yearns to own a Sunshine Mix-master, the newest model with the larger beater that increases speed and efficiency? One more chance remains to try for it in the recipe contest being conducted by The Washington Post and the National Electrical Supply Co.

"Hamburger" is the topic of the concluding week's contest. Hamburger is adaptable and can be served in many ways to vary its flavor. Look through your note book today, copy your favorite Hamburger recipe and mail it to Dorothea Duncan, in care of The Washington Post.

The 12 best recipes received will be awarded $1 each, and all of them will be entered with previous winners for the grand prizes. In addition to the Mix-master, there is a G. E. Hotpoint coffee maker as second prize and a Dominion sandwich grill for third-place winner.

If you are in the neighborhood of the National Electrical Supply Co., at 1330 New York avenue northwest, stop in and look at these fine pieces of equipment. They are an inspiration to any housewife, and make the slight effort of copying your best recipe well worth while, for the last minute contributor has an equal chance with every previous winner of taking the coveted grand prizes.

Ham, Cheese or Dates Are Used To Vary Basic Biscuit Recipe

Directions Given in Leaflet; Another Deals With Leftovers.

Using the same biscuit recipe over and over again may be advantageous in that the cook gains speed and proficiency, but the same biscuits can scarcely continue to tempt the family appetite. The solution is to use the same basic recipe, varying it with dates, raisins, cheese, jam and other ingredients.

"Biscuit Recipe Variations" is the subject of a food bulletin, offered free to Washington Post readers, which will prove helpful in this respect. The standard recipe and nine variations are given.

If you ever have stale bread or muffins in the bread box, or if Sunday's chicken or roast beef lingers well into the week, you will be interested in a bulletin entitled "Recipes Using Left-Overs."

Or if Sunday night company supper presents a problem, Dorothea Duncan, food editor of The Post, has prepared a bulletin on that subject, too. This includes a chafing dish supper, a salad platter supper, a hot buffet supper and a porch party supper. Complete menus and the most important recipes are given.

Fill in the coupon, indicating the bulletins you want, and mail at once to Dorothea Duncan, care of The Washington Post, inclosing a stamp. Only a limited number of these bulletins is available and they can be sent only as long as the supply lasts.

A new bulletin, "School Lunches," is announced this week and may be ordered at the same time.

To Color Soups.

Vegetable juice will impart a pretty color to pale soups. Spinach leaves give a fine green color. Pound the uncook leaves, tie them in a cloth, squeeze out all the juice and add this to the soup five minutes before serving. The strained juice of tomatoes, or the whole tomato if run through a sieve, will color soup red. Grated carrots give a fine amber color. Okra imparts a pale-green tinge.

Cheese With Marmalade.

Use cream cheese and orange marmalade as a spread for whole wheat bread sandwiches. Moisten one-half cup of cream cheese with one-fourth cup of cream. Spread this mixture on one side of sandwich. Spread other side with orange marmalade and press the slices together. Use one-half cup of marmalade for each half cup of cheese.

Wrap Melons Well.

Melons should not be placed in the refrigerator except to allow for chilling. It is always best to wrap melons in heavy waxed paper when they are placed in the refrigerator, to prevent odors penetrating other foods.

Baked Peaches, Flavored With Wine, Make Luscious Dessert

Fresh or canned peaches may be used in this delicious recipe. The fruit is baked, flavored with Muscatel wine or with brandy. The recipe is given in the accompanying column.

Autumn Fruits Can Be Served In Many Ways—Old and New

Baked Peaches Prepared With Wine Will Delight the Palate; Plum Trifle Is Another Delectable Dessert.

Autumn brings back old favorites; red and blue plums, grapes of all descriptions, Bartlett pears, crisp green apples flushed with red, and rosy peaches. Many of which will no doubt find their way into delicious pies, cakes, dumplings and other standard dishes. Your family will be clamoring for them one after another.

When old dishes fail to please, for the appetite is fickle, try some of the following versions that are both new and different.

Let's bake some peaches instead of serving them with sugar and cream, or between layers of crisp, warm shortcake. This dessert of juicy fruit spiced with wine will provide just the right tangy blend to delight the palate.

Baked Peaches With Wine.

6 large peaches
1 tablespoon butter
½ teaspoon mace
Grated rind of 1 lemon
½ cup water
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons any white wine or brandy.

Peel the peaches and put in a covered baking dish and add the butter, water, mace, sugar and white wine or brandy. Grate the rind of lemon over the top. Cover and bake in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) until the peaches are tender. Serve hot. The pits flavor the fruit so deliciously that they should not be removed. This is a delicious dessert served either hot or cold. Canned peaches may be used and 1 tablespoon Muscatel wine added to replace the fresh peach pit flavor. Place spoonful of whipped cream on top of each peach, garnish with maraschino cherry.

Your family will be as intrigued with this plum trifle as Little Jack Horner was with his pie.

Plum Trifle.

1 cup plum pulp
Sugar
3 egg whites, beaten until stiff
6 cup custards

Prepare pulp by cooking plums slowly until soft, and then rubbing them through a sieve. Cool. Add egg whites and sweeten mixture slightly. Heap this fruit generously on each cup custard. Serve very cold.

Cellaphane Wrappers Insure Fresh Eggs

If you walk into your grocery store and find that eggs have succumbed to the lure of a cellophane wrapper don't be surprised.

Tests which have been made with wrapped and unwrapped eggs kept under room conditions for a period of five days show that 96.22 per cent of the wrapped eggs remained grade A, while the unwrapped show only 80.61 per cent to remain grade A, or a difference of nearly 16 per cent.

The wrapping of eggs in cellophane should mean a great deal in quality to the consumer as well as being an important factor in dollars and cents to the packer.

Potato Pancakes Are Main Dish for Supper

While not a subsistence menu, the meal submitted by Mrs. E. A. Duhaime, of 1317 Fairmont street northwest, is inexpensive enough to be considered an economy meal. Her suggestion, with the two principal recipes, follows:

COOL WEATHER MENU.

Potato Pancakes With Bacon
Apple Sauce Lettuce Salad
Bread and Butter
Pineapple With Sherry Sauce
Coffee

Potato Pancake.

Grate 6 medium-sized potatoes and add 1½ tablespoons of flour, 1 scant teaspoon of salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Beat two eggs and add to potato batter. Fry in deep hot fat, preferably fat from bacon strips, to a crisp brown, and serve with apple sauce and bacon strips.

Pineapple and Sherry Sauce.

Arrange slices of pineapple on a platter and sprinkle with sugar (generously if it's fresh pineapple). Pour a wine glass of sherry over this and put in the refrigerator to cool. The sherry may be omitted and the pineapple juice or grape juice substituted, in the interest of economy.

This menu serves four. One-half pound of bacon is used, and though bacon is high, this amount is not exorbitant. The lettuce salad is simply lettuce, garnished with pepper rings and served with French dressing.

Mrs. Claribel Welsh, of Maryland U., Selects Winners Of Twelve Prizes Offered in Contest for Economy Menus

Nourishing Qualities and Balance Also Factors in Judging.

The twelve economy menus which are the prize winners in the weekly Post contest have the seal of approval of Mrs. Claribel Welsh, head of the food and nutrition department of the University of Maryland. Cooperating with Dorothea Duncan, food editor of The Post, Mrs. Welsh judged the contest just concluded.

Economy, nourishing qualities and balance were the deciding factors. Many recipes had to be discarded because they included potatoes in two different forms, or potatoes and spaghetti, both heavy in starches, in the same meal.

Mrs. Anne Mundy, 1504 V street southeast.
Mrs. E. M. Allen, 605 North Irving street, Clarendon, Va.
Nannie E. Hines, 1310 G street northeast.
Mrs. Mary Ellen Hallet, 1814 G street northwest.
Ethel M. Merritt, 225 Emerson street northwest.
Mrs. E. A. Duhaime, 1317 Fairmont street northwest.
Mrs. M. A. Lawyer, 2310 Connecticut avenue northwest.
Paula Gruber, 1121 Twenty-fourth street northwest.
Marion V. Stenken, 3616 Connecticut avenue northwest.
Ruth Hege, 1832 Wisconsin avenue northwest.
Mrs. John B. Porter, Leonardtown, Md.
Mrs. C. W. Burlin, 4306 Arkansas avenue northwest.

HAM AND RICE DINNER.

Vegetable Soup or Grape Fruit
Vegetable Rice and Ham Dish
Lemon Pie

Rice Dish.

1 tb. butter (heaping)
3 green peppers (chop fine)
3 onions (chop fine)
4 tomatoes or 1 can
1 cup rice (let rice stand in water 5 minutes)

Cook the peppers, onions and tomatoes in the butter. Boil rice in two cups of water then add the sauce and two bay leaves and five cloves. Simmer for 1½ hours—stir often. Fry 1½ lbs. ham and cut in small pieces. Add this to the rice and place in oven with crumbs on top to heat for 20 minutes Remove leaves and cloves when placed in baking dish. (Add water if rice seems dry.)

Lemon Pie.

1 lemon
1 cup sugar
2 tb. flour (rounding)
1 tb. butter
1 cup milk
2 eggs

Mix sugar, flour, butter well together. Add yolks of eggs and mix well, then the grated rind of one lemon and the juice may be added and mixed well. Add a pinch of salt, 1 cup of milk. Beat two egg whites stiff and stir into the above mixture. Bake in a moderate oven in a deep pie dish lined with rich pastry till custard is well set and the pie a little brown.

MRS. M. A. LAWYER.

MACKEREL DINNER.

Broiled Mackerel
Whole Boiled Potatoes
Spinach
Tomato Salad Corn Bread
Baked Apples
Coffee

Broiled Mackerel.

Clean mackerel split down the back, place on broiler rack which has been oiled, with inside up. Sprinkle with salt, red pepper and paprika. Cook beneath the flame until light brown. Serve with lemon. Serve potatoes with melted butter and minced parsley.

Baked Apples.

Wash and core six apples, fill with peppermint candy (balls) about one-half pounds. Sprinkle with cinnamon. Put a small piece of butter on each apple. A generous amount of sugar and one-fourth cup of water. Cook in a covered pan over low flame.

Pay Rolls Up 11% Over '34 In Maryland

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 16.—More than doubling expected gains, both employment and total pay rolls in Maryland in selected industries were higher in August than in July, according to a report released today by Charles S. Warner, commissioner of labor and statistics.

Employment increased 2.7 per cent while pay rolls were 4.51 per cent higher. Over a 12-year period the average gain of August over July has been 1 per cent for employment and 3 per cent for total earnings.

August figures showed a distinct gain over those for August, 1934, with the number of employed showing an increase over the year of 3 per cent, while earnings were 11 per cent higher than in the like month last year.

Baltimore Gain Is High.

The gain was nearly as great for the Baltimore area as it was through the whole State. City industries reported pay rolls 4.3 per cent higher in August than in July, while employment was up 1.9 per cent.

Compared to August, 1934, the figures for last month showed an increase of 1 per cent in employment and 12.1 per cent in earnings.

The manufacturing report is based on returns from 534 manufacturing plants, employing 67,420 workers, and having a total pay roll last month of $1,353,695. It includes 43 different industries.

Only Eleven Report Decreases.

Of these, 22 reported increases in both employment and pay rolls, while 11 had losses in both. Three others reported a loss in employment, but that total pay rolls were higher, while five industries reported lower earnings and higher employment.

Greatest increases in employment were reported from the building industry, not including public works, and quarries and mines.

Employment in building in August was 4.7 per cent higher than in July, although the August figure was still 6.2 per cent lower than in August of 1934. Mining showed a gain of 1.9 per cent over the previous month and 11.4 per cent over the like month of last year. Quarry employment was up 11.6 over the previous month.

Retail department stores showed a decrease of 4 per cent over July employment and was 3.8 per cent below the level for August, 1934. Department store pay rolls were 7.5 per cent lower than in July, although still 5.9 per cent above the like month last year.

Retail food stores reported employment off .3 per cent compared to July and pay rolls 1.2 per cent lower than that month.

6,500 Resume School Courses In Rockingham

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 16.—Rockingham County's 6,500 pupils returned to classes today in 85 schools under the direction of 250 teachers. Harrisonburg's 1,800 students will resume studies tomorrow.

With the completion of a $150,000 building and improvement program, the Rockingham schools are better prepared than ever before to care for pupils.

There are two new principals in the high schools. Arthur Parr, former assistant at Elkton, succeeds Raymond P. Bowman at Linville-Edom. Paul G. Kline succeeds Lee Cupp at McGaheysville.

The teaching staff for the Harrisonburg schools was announced today by Superintendent W. H. Keister as follows:

Highway Holdup Victim Pays and Pays and Pays

Newport News, Va., Sept. 15 (AP).—George Shenk, young Warwick County farmer, thought he had been victimized enough after a hitch hiker he offered a lift here August 3 robbed him of his car and $40 and left him standing in the road a few miles east of Richmond.

Last week he was notified by Richmond police his stolen automobile had been recovered there. He went to claim it and found he owed $10 to a storage garage for storing the car since August 4, the day police took the car to the garage.

Third Leader Quits in Fight Of Democrats

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Sept. 16.—Raymond A. Bailey, a member of the board of governors of the Young Democratic Clubs of Maryland, today handed in his resignation, bringing to three the number of officials of the organization who have resigned during the past 10 days.

Bailey, in commenting on his action, spoke of the recent resignations of a vice president and the director of college organization of the group as "indications that there is rising within the association general distrust of the regime of Lawrence B. Fenneman, Baltimore, as president."

First to Resign.

Carl H. Monsees, Salisbury, was the first to resign. He gave up his post as vice president several days ago and last week Warren Tydings, Davidsonville, resigned as director of college organizations for the group.

Bailey formerly was president of the Young Independent Democratic Clubs of Maryland, which was merged with the Young Peoples Democratic League of Maryland to form what is now known as the Young Democratic Clubs of Maryland.

The three resignations, coming in rapid-fire order, are taken in some circles to be definite signs of an organized revolt against the present set-up of the organization.

Charges "Trap."

"As a member of the board of governors," Bailey said, "I assert that nothing more could have been expected, since the board, with several necessary exceptions, was handpicked by Fenneman."

Regarding the merger of the two organizations, Bailey contended that "we are led into a trap" by a man who "seeks only to attain political prestige, power and leadership by using the members of the organization as a stepladder."

"The membership has at last discovered the meaning of it all," Bailey stated. "The curtain has raised on the real comedy of the situation. instead of being in the cast, I have decided to join the audience and laugh. I understand I will have company."

Virginian Injured In Fight Over Fowl

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 16.—Roaming poultry was the alleged cause of a fight between Enoch Weedon, 42, of Doswell Field, and W. R. Evans, 57, his next door neighbor.

Weedon, from his bed in Mary Washington Hospital, here, where he is being treated for numerous cuts and bruises, told police Evans' fowls constantly invaded his back yard and when he remonstrated with Evans the latter drew a knife. A combat ensued until neighbors interferred. Evans suffered only a minor cut.

Fingerlings Supplied.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Sept. 16.—A supply of 2,000 fingerling small-mouth bass was sent from the State hatcheries, Ridge, near here to a committee of the Ohio County Wild Life League, to be placed in Wheeling Creek.

County Aids Seek Audit Of Tax Books

Anne Arundel Economy Committee Declares Affairs 'Muddled.'

Taxpayers' Complaints Are Cited; Report Is Due Today.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 16.—Asserting numerous complaints by taxpayers throughout Anne Arundel County, and other information, "gives evidence that the late treasurer's accounts and records are in a muddle," the county efficiency and economy committee today recommended an audit of tax collections for back years.

C. Albert Hodges, former copnty treasurer, now is engaged in collecting delinquent taxes for 1934 and prior years, and arranging for a tax sale to be held at the courthouse door on October 14.

Report Is Due.

The economy committee is headed by John Dep. Douw, president of the local bank of the County Trust Co. Other members are E. W. Stoll, secretary; Carey L. Meredith, E. Churchill Murray and James H. Ellis. Their recommendations in writing will be presented to the board of county commissioners at a meeting tomorrow.

Besides recommending the audit be made "by some reliable firm of accountants," the committee further suggested:

The audit should cover completely tax collections for back years, particularly over the periods from January 1 to May 7 each year.

'Got to Win' Baer Says; Confident

Emphasizes Chance to Make Million If He Defeats Louis.

By Edward J. Neil,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

SPECULATOR, N. Y., Sept. 16.—One thing, above all else, is drumming through Max Baer's mind, coming out of his mouth every time he opens it.

"This is one fight I've got to win. I've got to. No two ways about it. I've got to."

Either the former heavyweight champion of the world, ready to fight Joe Louis a week from tomorrow night, is "whistling his way past the graveyard" as some of the critics thought who heard him talk today, or else he's so intent on this one, so serious that he can think of nothing else but the new Negro menace.

Pride to Consider.

Baer did no work aside from his usual five miles on the road this morning, but he did hold forth with the assembled experts for an hour on the porch of his log cabin, buried in the woods four miles from Speculator.

"First, there's my pride," he explains. "I tossed off my title to Jimmy Braddock and I never knew how much I valued it until it was gone. I've got to get that back. Louis is the first thing in the way.

"Second, I've got a chance to make $500,000 in the next few months. I'll get a big chunk of this $1,000,000 gate. There's a $100,000 radio contract waiting for me, an exhibition tour worth another $10,000. There is $250,000 waiting for me in the movies, all if I win. I need that dough and no 21-year-old kid is going to keep me from getting it."

In Great Shape.

The woods and the lonesomeness of this mountain retreat are beginning to bear down on the playboy who is more at home in cabarets and night clubs. He's in great shape, weighing 211 pounds now, trained to perfect condition by Izzy Klein, the fellow who prepares Barney Ross for his big fights.

"I can't get out of here quick enough," Max says.

"I've been here a month and it feels like a year. The morning of the fight a plane drops down on this lake here, and I take off for New York, Joe Louis and the next million."

Baer likes the idea, too, that he stands alone as the white man capable of stopping the new black menace. He's tremendously confident, or maybe, as some of the boys listening to him intently believe, he's too confident, perhaps showing the first signs of the fear that shivers almost every man who has faced Louis, made nervous wrecks of Primo Carnera and King Levinsky before they even got their hands up.

Negro His Cook.

Strangely enough, he has a Negro, Connie, doing his cooking, and while she likes her job and Max, the future isn't very bright for her either.

"They ain't a pusson in all Harlem will speak to me after I gets back," she wailed. "Letter from mah boy friend says ah'm a traitor."

V. M. I.'s Cadets, Grim in Practice, Make Ready for Football Wars

V. M. I. Coach Optimistic Over '35

Raftery Believes Team Will Be Far From a Pushover.

By Lewis F. Atchison.
A Staff Correspondent.

LEXINGTON, Va., Sept. 15.—Virginia Military Institute's star is rising, in the football firmament, slowly, but steadily and an air of optimism prevades the practice field where Head Coach Bill Raftery is tuning up his flying squadron for the 1935 Southern Conference campaign.

Raftery believes the Cadets are due for a better season than they experienced last year. His hopes are based on a better-than-average first team and a coach's intuition that V. M. I. has a few "breaks" coming to it this autumn. Last year the little Red eleven was victimized by innumerable unhappy events that turned the tide against it in several games and were contributing factors in a disastrous season.

Good Account of Itself.

The small, wiry Cadet leader who learned his football at Washington and Lee just across the way, doesn't expect to finish unbeaten or untied. He knows Tulane, Columbia and one or two other schools scheduled very probably will have the advantage over his men in numerical strength, but he is satisfied that V. M. I. is going to give a good account of itself.

Raftery's greatest problem at this writing is reserves. His first eleven will be strong enough, but the second team will be so far behind and the third team still farther back, so that capable substitutes are going to be as scarce as honest politicians. One of his greatest losses occurred last spring in practice when "Bo" McMillan, first cousin of Centre's original "Bo," broke his leg in scrimmage.

Loss Is Big Blow.

McMillin had been counted on as regular quarter back and his loss is a terrific blow to the team and has entirely disrupted the coach's plans. Haas, a regular end, failed to make the grade scholastically and with the best reserves lost by graduation the cadet mentor finds himself with another acute problem to be solved. There have been other losses, including Tucker Watkins, the team's outstanding back, but Raftery still insists that V. M. I. will be a better balanced, more powerful outfit this year.

In the backfield Dick Dodson, a converted full back, looks like the man to call the signals. He will have Archie Witt, conference 135-pound wrestling champion, and Thornton Campbell pressing him for the berth, but Dodson looks like the best of the trio.

Paired at Halves.

Wayt Clark, who probably will do all of the kicking, and Bill Roberson, a promising sophomore, have been paired off at the halves and look like fixtures. Jim Beard, 180-pound sophomore, has attracted Raftery's fancy and will start at full back. Beard is the lad counted on to supply the power in V. M. I.'s attack. He can buck a line for those precious yards that mean the difference between the loss of the ball and a first down.

Clark, Roberson and Beard assure the team of a diversified and deceptive attack by their passing and running ability. Raftery intends to utilize the lateral pass to the fullest, and although he emphasizes this point, he will not throw them to the detriment of his running game. He still leans to the long, downfield passes. Again, the best part of his lateral attack will be downfield, not behind the line of scrimmage or just over it.

In the starting line Dave Kane and Ralph Tetzlaff will be seen at the flanks, with Capt. Harry Hightower and Russ Coleman, two splendid looking tackles, digging in Among V. M. I.'s weapons. James Beard practices his place-kicking specialty as Quarter Back Witt holds the ball. Beard, a 180-pound sophomore, has virtually clinched the full back post.

Browns' Homers Defeat Yanks, 5-2

Clift and Coleman Stars; Ruffing Is Victim.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 16.—With Harland Clift and Ed Coleman accounting for four runs as they each drove out a homer, the St. Louis Browns turned back the New York Yankees, 5 to 2, in the opening game of the series today. New York's defeat, coupled with the Tigers' victory over the Red Sox, dropped the Yankees 9½ games back of the league leaders.

Clift drove in the first of his two runs with a triple in the second and hit for a circuit with the bases empty in the fifth. Coleman connected with a four-bagger with one on in the sixth. Red Ruffing, who matched Merritt Cain's seven-hit pitching, hit a homer for the Yankees in the eighth.

The slugging honors among the New York Yankees went to Red Rolfe, who hit three singles and drove in the other run.

Brendard Victorious At Hawthorne Track

Chicoga, Sept. 16 (AP).—Charging into the lead 20 yards from the finish, Brendard, from Charles T. Fisher's Dixiana Stable, won the 5½-furlong feature at Hawthorne today.

T. C. Worden's Net Profit, an even-money favorite, led the parade most of the way, but weakened and finished second a length and a half behind Brendard. J. E. Widener's Hose was third.

Tigers Beat Boston; Gain Full Game

One Big Inning Wins for Leaders, 5 to 2.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—Detroit pulled ahead to a 9½-game lead over the New York Yankees in the American League pennant chase today by whipping Boston, 5 to 3, here, while St. Louis turned back the Yankees in New York.

Tommy Bridges, Tiger hurler, won his twentieth game of the season. The Red Sox outhit Detroit 10 to 8, but a Tiger uprising in the fourth spelled defeat for Boston.

Detroit scored all its runs in the fourth inning off Jack Wilson on singles by Mickey Cochrane, Gehringer, Walker and Rogell, combined with a base on balls issued to Goslin and errors by Almada, Werber and Melillo.

Boston counted once in the third when Almada and Cronin singled after Werber was walked. Two more runs for Boston were put over in the ninth on singles by Pinch-hitter Miller, Werber and Almada and Cronin's outfield fly.

Cards Blank Dodgers to Hold Own

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 16.—The second-place St. Louis Cardinals, coming back after losing three straight to the Giants, held their ground in the torrid National League pennant race today and defeated the Brooklyn Dodgers, 1 to 0, in a mound duel between Paul Dean and Van Mungo.

The Cardinals remained within two games of the pace-setting Chicago Cubs but increased their margin over the third-place Giants to 2½ games.

Dean, making his first appearance on the mound in six days, blanked the Dodgers with six hits while striking out six and issuing only one base on balls. Mungo went the St. Louis player one better in the matter of hits and strikeouts, allowing only five safe blows and fanning seven, but he handed out four free tickets.

Three Dodgers Sent Home, Rookies to Play

St. Louis, Sept. 16 (AP).—Manager Casey Stengel of the Brooklyn Dodgers sent three players home today for the remainder of the season to make room for new young talent. They are Outfielder Len Koenecke, Pitcher Les Munns and Bobby Barr, a rookie right-hander.

Koenecke's place has been taken by Buster Mills, recently obtained from Rochester. Outfielder Johnny Cooney and Infielder Vincent Sherlock, lately of Indianapolis, are expected to join the Dodgers tomorrow, while Infielder Dedeaux, from Dayton, Ohio, reported today.

Nats Bow, 9-1; Given 4 Hits By Jones

Hadley and Russell Are Pounded for 10, With Five for Appling.

By Shirley Povich.

REACHING mid-season form, the Nats yesterday lost their third straight ball game and skidded to within a game and a half of seventh place.

They met up with Sad Sam Jones on the mound for the Chicago White Sox and out of respect for old age, or something, were extremely lenient with the league's oldest pitcher. In fact, they made only four hits against the old fellow.

Washington's pitching wasn't so good, either. Irving Hadley and Jack Russell scattered ten Chicago hits—scattered them all over the premises—and the upshot of the matter was a 9-1 victory for the White Sox.

Outfielders Idle.

So futilely were the Nats swinging against Jones that they became a party to some kind of a league record. Not a put-out did a Chicago outfielder make throughout the game, what with the Nats popping to the infield and grounding out except when making those four hits. It was the first idle afternoon spent by a club's outfield since the White Sox last equaled the record in a game with the Yanks in 1911.

For five innings Jones had a one-hit game in his possession, and then, with the aid of a muff by Appling, the Nats scored a run to avoid a shut-out. But Appling was engaged all afternoon in redeeming himself for that error. He contributed five straight hits to the White Sox attack.

Three Runs in First.

The White Sox made great haste against Hadley's pitching, scoring three runs in the first inning when Appling lined a double into right field at a time when the bases were full following a walk to Radcliffe, a hit batsman and Hayes' single.

At one point between the first and fifth innings, Hadley struck out five White Sox in a row, but in the fifth he lapsed again and permitted a run with the aid of an error by Red Marion, the Chattanooga rookie, who celebrated his debut in left field for the Nats by contributing a two-base error on Hayes' single to left.

Hadley was excused after the fifth when Buddy Lewis, another Chattanooga recruit, batted for him and popped tamely to Appling, but Jack Russell thereafter made the game safe for the White Sox who, with Appling hitting regularly, picked up a single run in the sixth and a pair in each the seventh and eighth.

Four Get Singles.

The only Nats able to solve Jones' delivery were Dee Miles, Buddy Myer, Senor Estallella and Cliff Bolton, each of whom hit singles.

Besides the ball game, the Nats lost the services of Cecil Travis for a few days. Travis was unable to check his spring after catching Bonura's foul fly in the third inning and draped himself across the left field boxes, suffering a badly bruised shin as he crashed into the low wall.

Cavaretta Hits Homer; Chicago Holds Margin Over Cardinals.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Billy Terry and his New Yok Giants found out about the ampaging Chicago Cubs today.

Back fom their winning wars with the gas house gang of St. Louis, the Giants came to Wrigley Field and were given a brutal, 8 to 3, licking by the grim Cubs, who stretched their spectacular winning streak to 13 in a row to hold their first-place margin over the pursuing Cardinals and push the Giants four and one-half games behind them.

A fourth inning blast, far more detonating than any they heard in St. Louis, felled the Giants as a wild thong of 30,000 frenzied fans cheered their heroes, notably Lonnie Warneke, who muffled the Terry guns with seven hits, and Frank Demaree, who lifted them out of their seats with a remarkable catch in the fourth inning to rob Mel Ott of a home run that might have given this story a different ending.

Out of fresh pitchers after the St. Louis series, where his once faded pennant hopes arose again, Terry gambled with a raw rookie today by sending Harry Gumbert, obtained from Baltimore three weeks ago, against the Cubs. The Cubs immediately showed him that he was in the big leagues and against the "hottest" team in the game by belting him for eight hits and five runs in the three and one-third innings he worked. Two other pitchers followed him, doing better, but the damage was done.

Score in First.

The Cubs scored in the first inning when Galan doubled to left, trotted to third on Herman's grounder and came tearing home when Lindstrom singled to center. The Giants came right back with two runs in the second.

Ott was passed and Leiber doubled to center, sending Ott to third. Both scored when Mancusco singled to center.

After holding the Cubs scoreless in the second and third, Gumbert met a crash of hits in the fourth that drove him out of the game.

The Cubs scored their final run in the fifth inning when Cavarretta drove a towering home run into the right-field bleachers. The Giants scored again in the sixth when Leiber, after Ott had popped to Jurges, singled to left and scored on Mancusco's third straight hit, a double to center.

Fluton, $13.40 Shot, Wins Havre Feature Before 7,000 Fans

Little Filly 2-Length Victor

Vanderbilt Entry Fails; Daily Double Pays $38.00 Mutuel.

By Walter Haight,

HAVRE DE GRACE RACE TRACK, Md., Sept. 16.—The Vanderbilt entry didn't today. The fact that most of the time the Vanderbilt entry does most of the time was responsible for the fact that the majority of the 7,000 customers went down under the stands and bought wads and wads of ticket No. 1440. That ticket represented the cerise and white pair of Speed and Balcony.

So brisk was the action on Speed and Balcony that the odds shrank to a mere 1 to 2 as the field of 11 paraded to the post.

When the six-furlong dash had become the property of the chartmakers, Fluton, a little filly from the Foxcatcher Farms, was the winner, with Night Cap, a long shot, second, two lengths behind. The Vanderbilt stable was able to salvage only third money, but not because its representatives were not trying.

Tries Same Tactics.

Having worked the one-two punch to win Saturday's feature, Trainer Stotler tried the same tactics today. Speed, the fastest breaker, was elected to set the pace and run the other early-footers into the ground. Balcony was supposed to supply the closing punch.

Speed did all expected of him, but instead of Balcony it was Fluton which developed the momentum that decided the issue. With Jockey Peters doing the urging, Fluton could not be displaced, while the tiring Speed failed to outlast Night Cap for the second money. Balcony's closing effort was good for only fourth position.

Fluton, lukewarm during the betting, paid off with a $13.40 mutuel.

Double Pays $38.10.

Daily doubling produced a $38.10 mutuel, but many in the crowd had visions of collecting fortunes. The winning combination was that of Green Mist, a favorite in the first, and Jakovia in the third. The concluding race of the double contained 14 horses and the possible pay-offs ranged from $24.40 through a group of $178.30, $319.50, $639.10, $1,534 to a pair of $2,556.70's.

The opener proved a two-horse race between Green Mist, the property of H. Bruce, and Foot Step from the Vanderbilt Stable, and the latter came out second best, with Rowes Crump third in the field of a dozen. Green Mist opened a long lead at the far turn and seemed to be headed for an easy victory, but Jockey Bejshack brought Foot Step up with a rush in the stretch and was wearing down the winner at the finish. Green Mist was the favorite at a $5.20 mutuel.

$104.10 Mutuel Paid.

To the tune of $104.10 mutuel, Petee Blue won the second race from the favored Idle Victory in a driving finish which saw the two rivals ridden out. Sioux Chief was a well-beaten third as 14 paraded to the post. Jockey C. Rosengarten seemed satisfied with a contending position along the backstretch, but swung his mount through on the inside at the stretch turn to take the lead from Sioux Chief and hold Idle Victory to second money.

The combination of Jockey Eddie Smith and the filly Jakovia, well known on the half-mile tracks, accounted for the third race, a rather cheap affair. Boocord and Miss Snow, a pair of well-played horses, were second and third. Jakovia rewarded the faithful with an $11.90 mutuel. It was an all-Washington victory, Philmore Sanford, the owner, W. H. Denham, the trainer, and Smith, are all from the Capital.

Supreme Court Wins.

Those who played Supreme Court in the fifth race stayed on the gold standard with a $53.30 mutuel. Cross Ruff, after opening at 8-1, was backed into favoritism and ran an impressive second. Miss Careful was third in the mile and 70 yards test.

The half-mile tracks were well represented in the sixth race and it was only natural that Dona Dulcin should be the winner. The filly led, among others, Dunair and Red Label to pay a $13.10 mutuel.

Sparky sent the favorite players home happy by taking the seventh race from Dearzin and Arab. The pay-off was $4.40.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GREEN MIST, $5.20, 13.40, 13.00; FOOTSTEP, $4.00, $3.20; ROWES CRUMP, $5.80.

GREEN MIST sprinted into an easy lead in the opening furlong, went to a drive in the last five-sixteenths when challenged, then held on strongly to stall off FOOTSTEP. The latter, in nearest pursuit of the winner, made strong efforts in the late stages, but faltered nearing the end. ROWES CRUMP, slow to settle in his best stride, finished full of run in the last three furlongs. PEACE MOVE, also slow to get going, came with belated speed in the closing stages. IDENTICAL was unable to threaten in the closing test.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:50. Off at 2:56½. Winner, H. L. Straus' b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PETEE BLUE, $104.10, $28.30, $12.90; IDLE VICTORY, $4.00, $3.00; SIOUX CHIEF, $4.10.

PETEE BLUE, kept in near pursuit of the leaders, secured racing room on the inside when entering the home stretch, secured a slight lead, then held on stubbornly to withstand IDLE VICTORY. The latter, rated close to SIOUX CHIEF, lost ground when displacing the pacemaker at the turn for home, but was unable to keep pace with the winner in the final drive. SIOUX CHIEF had good speed while setting the pace and held on strongly after being overtaken. DALMATIA went in the thick of contention, but could not gain during the final drive. SUNNED was under strong handling for the entire trip. JANE ELLEN could not improve her position after losing ground.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:26. Off at 3:27½. Winner, P. Sanford's h. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JAKOVIA, $11.90, $4.60, $3.10; BOOCORD, $4.40, $3.00; MISS SNOW, $3.70.

JAKOVIA, away in the first flight and kept prominently placed, took command midway of the turn, then tired hard for the balance of the trip, had enough left to withstand BOOCORD. The latter worked his way up on the outside, responded strongly and was catching the winner gradually in the final drive. MISS SNOW, rushed hard to gain early command, raced JOBAKHETA into defeat, saved ground, but weakened in the last quarter-mile. DARKLING, slow to get into full stride, came through between horses after reaching the home stretch and finished fastest of all. PLAY BOOK met with slight interference leaving the back stretch, recovered quickly and held on strongly.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLUTON, $13.40, $9.20, $3.00; NIGHTCAP, $20.00, $4.20; SPEED, $2.10.

FLUTON gained a position in the first flight during the opening furlong, gained fast in the five-sixteenths when taken to the outside of the leaders, wore down SPEED inside the final furlong and drew out swiftly nearing the finish. NIGHTCAP worked his way out of tight quarters when leaving the back stretch, responded strongly and finished fast in the final drive. SPEED opened up a safe lead in the first half-mile, saved ground, but failed to rally when placed to a drive in the last quarter-mile. BALCONY, prominent early and under slight restraint, could not stay when forced to a hard drive.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:30. Off at 4:31½. Winner, R. S. Watts' ch. f. (3), by Wise Counsel—Yermilla. Trained by J. L. Watts. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:48 3-5, 1:13 2-5, 1:39 2-5, 1:43 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUPREME COURT, $53.30, $13.50, $7.40; CROSS RUFF, $3.80, $3.00; MISS CAREFUL, $3.20.

SUPREME COURT, steadied around the first turn, reached the pacemaker readily when entering the home stretch, assumed a slight lead midway of the home stretch, then continuing strongly came out slowly nearing the finish. CROSS RUFF, closing into a contending position early, challenged strongly to set on even terms with the leaders when nearing the home stretch, responded to punishment, but weakened in the closing stride. MISS CAREFUL finished stoutly in the final drive. FLAMING MAMIE was under pressure from the start, saved much ground until making a wide turn into the home stretch, then failed to menace. U DEMON could not threaten when put to a drive. RED BADGE sprinted into a long lead early, but flattened out badly when called on.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:00. Off at 5:04. Winner, Miss E. Hayman's b. g. (4), by Donnacona—Dulcipes II. Trained by C. F. Miles, jr. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:48 1-5, 1:14 2-5, 1:41, 1:46.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DONNA DULCIN, $13.10, $5.50, $4.00; DUNAIR, $15.20, $9.90; RED LABEL, $5.20.

DONNA DULCIN, taken under slight reserve when unable to outfoot RED LABEL, came determinedly when placed to a drive and, closing strongly during the stretch run, was up in the concluding strides. DUNAIR, rated close up for six furlongs, challenged stoutly when put to a drive, wrested command from RED LABEL inside the closing furlong, but failed to resist the winner under vigorous handling. RED LABEL was sent into the lead midway of the back stretch, responded under gaining command and fought it out gamely when the final test came. SUN ABBOT, steadied along the first six furlongs, was placed to punishment in the last five-sixteenths and made up ground in the late stages. PATIENT SAINT closed stoutly after being slow to get into full stride.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:36. Off at 5:37½. Winner, R. H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPARKY, $4.40, $3.90, $2.70; DEARZIN, $8.10, $4.10; ARAB, $3.20.

SPARKY, restrained back of the leaders during the early racing, bettered her position gradually to enter contention, came to the outside of the leaders when reaching the home stretch, then, closing strong, wore DEARZIN down in the last sixteenth. DEARZIN gained the lead midway of the back stretch, was steadied while saving ground, but could not withstand the winner under severe pressure. ARAB improved his position steadily and closed willingly. OUR SHIP, engaged with the leaders all during the early running, weakened when the real issue came.

Emory and Henry To Open on Friday

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Emory, Va., Sept. 16.—Emory and Henry's Wasps will put King Football back on his throne when they open the season for Virginia colleges here next Saturday night by meeting Carson-Newman.

Judging by advance notices of Carson-Newman's strength, the contest will be the toughest opener in years for Coach Jackson's men. Fifteen lettermen from last year returned to Carson-Newman and Coach Sam "Frosty" Holt declared a week ago that his team would be much stronger than a year ago.

For the past several days a picked second team of Wasp candidates has been running Carson-Newman plays against the tentative Emory varsity.

Grains Rocket Higher as War Clouds Gather

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 16.—War fears brought a notable accession of buying orders into the wheat market today and gave a decided hoist to prices.

Many of the orders to buy wheat were of foreign origin. A particular stimulus was announcement that war risk clauses of general insurance policies had been canceled by London underwriters.

Wheat in Chicago closed strong at about the day's top level, 1⅜ to 2¼ cents a bushel higher than Saturday's finish; December, 95⅝ to 95¾; corn at ⅛ decline to a rise of 2 cents; December, 57⅛ to 57¼; oats, unchanged to ⅜ higher, and provisions unchanged to 30 cents advance.

Underlying Strength.

From the outset Chicago wheat values gave evidence of underlying strength, largely as a result of disquieting political advices from overseas.

Bulls contended that, with the exception of present heavy receipts at domestic primary centers, conditions the world over appeared much in favor of the constructive side of the wheat market. Special notice was taken of unusual buoyancy of Argentine prices, the Buenos Aires market starring for the eighth consecutive day.

It was in vain bearish traders suggested that for the time being the wheat market had probably reflected in full whatever war influence the conditions abroad might have created.

Setbacks Shortlived.

In the face of such suggestions setbacks of prices were shortlived, and the market likewise almost completely ignored more than 4,500,000 bushels' increase of the domestic visible stocks of wheat the past week.

Helping the day's advance of prices were statements that compared with a year ago Liverpool wheat was up 8¼ cents, whereas Chicago was down 11¼ cents.

Corn, rye and oats took their cue mainly from the wheat market. In some quarters talk was current that, should the Government lend 45 to 50 cents a bushel on corn, it would tend to retard corn movement.

News Advertising Gains in August

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Sept. 16.—Advertising lineage in newspapers held an even keel during August, when compared with August of last year, all aiding to an analysis compiled by Advertising Age.

The total volume of all advertising carried in the newspapers of 84 cities, which were measured both in August, 1935, and August, 1934, increased about 1.8 per cent this year. The publications measured carried 131,124,895 lines of advertising last month, compared with 128,781,007 lines last year.

Retail lineage went up approximately 1.9 per cent, the August total being 73,319,644 lines, against 71,908,811 lines last year, while general lineage was up from 20,673,945 lines last year to 21,371,662 lines this year, an increase of about 3.4 per cent.

Automotive lineage continued to show the downward trend which has been evident for several months, and which is accounted for, in large measure, by the sensational gains registered in this classification last year. In August the newspapers measured carried 7,806,772 lines of automotive copy, a drop of 1,770,470 lines, or about 18.6 per cent, below the 1934 figure of 9,577,242 lines.

Financial lineage increased about 1.5 per cent, from 1,908,581 lines last year to 1,937,310 lines this year; and classified continued its impressive gains with 23,756,895 lines this year against 21,556,169 last year, for an increase of 10.2 per cent.

Steel Rate to Decline 1.4 Points, Forecast

New York, Sept. 16 (AP).—The American Iron and Steel Institute today estimated that steel operations for the current week would decline 1.4 points to 48.3 per cent of capacity.

This compares with an operating rate of 48.8 per cent a month ago and 22.3 per cent a year ago.

The estimated decline for this week followed a rise of 3.9 points scored last week. The drop this week was the third which has occurred since July 1, when the rate stood at a low for the year of 32.8 per cent of capacity.

The operating rate as of September 2, including the Labor Day holiday, registered a decrease of 2.1 points.

Sears Roebuck Sales Up 25%

President George F. Dixon Announces British Subsidiary.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 16.—Sears, Roebuck & Co. today reported sales for the eighth period, August 14 to September 10, increased 18.2 per cent over sales for the corresponding period last year and were greater than sales for the seventh period this year. For the first eight periods, January 30 to September 10, sales were 25 per cent greater than during the corresponding period in 1934.

Eighth-period sales in 1935 totaled $27,913,502, compared with $23,609,935 last year and $24,587,644 the seventh period this year. For the eight periods this year sales totaled $230,623,450, compared with $184,533,551 the 1934 corresponding figure.

Searsint, Ltd., has been organized in London to distribute products of Sears International, Inc., in the united kingdom and Ireland, George F. Dixon, president of Sears International, announced today on his return here from a trip in Europe.

The new company, financed entirely by British capital and operated exclusively by British business men, he said, would have no financial connection with Sears, Roebuck & Co., but will utilize its own dealer organization to distribute Sears merchandise under its own franchise.

Sears' only relation with Searsint, Ltd., and its retail dealer organization will be that of a source for the merchandise which will be sold in England through Searsint, Ltd., he said.

Morgan Firm Opening Day Lacks Pomp

Six Members of 'Junior House' Quietly Begin Work in New Quarters.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 16.—Six young bankers, who until last week reported for work at the House of Morgan, at Wall and Broad streets, this morning turned in at No. 2 Wall street and proceeded to a suite of offices occupying the entire nineteenth floor.

They hung up their hats, took places at desks, and formally opened the career of Morgan, Stanley & Co., Inc., or "the junior House of Morgan."

Four of the six last week gave up partnerships in J. P. Morgan & Co. to launch an investment banking business.

Henry Sturgis Morgan, son of J. P. Morgan, was not present for the opening ceremonies because he was aboard ship returning from Europe. He was expected to arrive late this afternoon.

Harold Stanley, lean-faced president of the organization and former chief of J. P. Morgan's utility financing business, arrived at 9:30.

Partners took places at the desks which they occupied at the Morgan firm. They were arranged in two rows in an open section of the suite which overlooks the spire of old Trinity Church at the head of Wall street.

Partners in the new firm are Harold Stanley, William Ewing, Henry S. Morgan, formerly members of J. P. Morgan & Co.; Perry E. Hall and Edward H. York, jr., former partners of Drexel & Co., the Philadelphia affiliate of J. P. Morgan & Co., and John M. Young, former manager of the bond department of J. P. Morgan & Co.

Foreign Exchange.

Guilders held the center of the stage in world foreign exchange dealings yesterday as the Bank of the Netherlands raised its discount rate to 6 per cent from 5 per cent in attempt to ease pressure on the currency, according to the Associated Press.

The guilder rallied sharply in New York, up .12 of a cent at 67.50 cents. Earlier in London, where the market was reported to fear nearby devaluation of the Dutch unit, the bank rate announcement likewise caused improvement to 7.33½ to the pound.

The French franc rose .00½ of a cent in New York, aided by the firmine of guilders, to 6.59¾ cents. In earlier Paris trading the dollar had been about steady at the equivalent of 6.592 cents to the franc.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Profit-Taking Succeeded in Stemming the Recent Upward Rush and Most Shares Closed Fractionally Lower.

By Frank MacMillen.

Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Sept. 16.—Profit taking finally undermined stock market resistance today and most active issues, especially some of the recent favorites, gave ground. Even though declines in the list considerably outnumbered advances, losses in the so-called pivotal shares, with a few exceptions, were less than a point.

Representatives of the aircraft, copper and amusement groups were among those which were able to counter the generally reactionary trend at times.

The Associated Press averages of 60 stocks dipped .2 of a point at 50. Utilities appeared to slip back a little more readily than other sections, but rails and industrials gave up nearly as much. Turnover in the Stock Exchange slowed down to 1,492,650 shares.

Bonds Follow.

Bonds followed rather closely in the equity market's footsteps, though changes were mostly narrow except in some of the secondary rails and in some industrials which have recently been trading vehicles. U. S. Government obligations continued under moderate pressure.

Attention was focused on the recent strain on the Holland guilder in the foreign exchange market as the Bank of the Netherlands raised its discount rate to 6 per cent from 5 per cent. The guilder improved moderately.

A statement by President Sewell Avery of Montgomery Ward, revealing that taxes were cutting into the company's profits, was followed by some selling in the retail group. The favorable sales report of Sears Roebuck for the four weeks to September 10 showing a gain of 18.2 per cent over the same period of 1934 failed to help sentiment toward mail order shares appreciably. Montgomery Ward ended down around 2 points at 34⅜, and Sears Roebuck was off more than a point at 58¼.

Copper Rise.

The expected rise in the domestic price of copper finally arrived with a boost to 9 cents a pound from the 8½ cents previously prevailing. Export prices likewise firmed further. Copper shares gave signs of having already discounted the development to a considerable extent. The report of Kennecott for the first half of 1935 showing profits at 32 cents a share, a little below a year ago, may have served to dampen enthusiasm, although the stock improved a fraction.

The decline in steel operations by 1.4 points to 48.3 per cent of capacity was not surprising to most trade observers, who had expected such a development, as the shutdown in automobile plants for new models became general. Prices of most steel shares held steady or yielded fractions.

The disturbed political situation abroad turned some traders' attention toward the so-called "war babies." Du Pont was up more than 3 at 127¼, while others ahead major fractions to more than a point included United Aircraft, Douglas and Sperry.

Small losses appeared in such issues as United States Steel at 47, Chrysler at 71¼, Union Pacific at 101, Westinghouse at 76¾ and Santa Fe at 51¼. American Telephone dipped more than a point at 140½.

Foreign Markets.

LONDON—A weaker tendency prevailed on the stock exchange yesterday influenced by week-end developments of the Italo-Abyssinian situation. Prices were lower due to the absence of support and some selling, while German bonds and copper shares were firm exception. The market closed dull, according to the Associated Press.

PARIS—Traders were hesitant on the bourse yesterday due to the international situation and issues again lost part of their recent gains. Rentes along with international shares were unsettled, while Suez issues declined sharply. The closing was heavy.

BERLIN—Selling predominated on the bourse yesterday, forcing prices to decline. The market closed listless.

Local Bankers Plan to Attend A. B. A. Session

Will See Robert V. Fleming Elected President of Bank Body.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank, who will be inducted as president of the American Bankers Association at the annual convention in November, will be accompanied by a large group of Washington financiers, it was learned last night.

A leader in national financial affairs for some years, Mr. Fleming achieved Nation-wide prominence in his recent representation of the national banking body at negotiations over the banking act. It was held due to his efforts that a number of objectionable features, such as the high deposit insurance rate, were stricken out.

Mr. Fleming was named president of the national banking body by the nominating committee last spring. Nomination is equal to election, awaiting only formal ratification of the convention members.

Local members of the contingent that will accompany Fleming to New Orleans were disclosed yesterday by Thomas J. Croom, vice president and cashier of the Bank of Commerce and Savings, and second vice president of the District Bankers Association. They include:

Washington Members.

Francis G. Addison, jr., president of the Security Savings & Commercial Bank; Hilleary G. Hoskinson, vice president, Riggs National Bank; Arthur J. Linn, auditor, Hamilton National Bank; Lanier P. Mc Lachlen, president, McLachlen Banking Corporation; H. H. McKee, president, National Capital Bank and East Washington Savings Bank; Sidney F. Taliaferro, trust officer, Riggs National; Wilmer J. Waller, vice president and cashier, Hamilton National; Charles H. Doing, president District Bankers Association and vice president, Washington Loan & Trust Co.; Karl W. Corby, first vice president, District Bankers Association, and partner in W. B. Hibbs & Co.; Mr. Groom, chairman of the committee on arrangements for transportation; E. T. Chewning, director, Bank of Commerce & Savings; I. I. Chorpening, chief bank examiner, Fifth Federal Reserve District; J. L. Bailey, head of the Baltimore office, fifth district bank examiner; Victor B. Deyber, president, Second National Bank; Joshua Evans, vice president of the Hamilton National; J. Frank White, vice president and cashier of the National Bank of Washington, and M. H. Calnan, vice president and cashier, Liberty National Bank.

Educating the public to the advantages of insurance is the theme of the thirteenth annual convention of the insurance advertising conference which started yesterday in New York. Companies writing more than 75 per cent of all life, fire, casualty, surety and marine insurance business in the United States will be represented at the convention.

Through increased advertising, particularly in newspapers, members of the conference plan to seek further co-operation from the public in keeping down losses, pointing out that large losses usually mean premiums.

President Clarence A. Palmer, president of the Insurance Co. of North America, presided at the first session. Lew Russell Palmer, conservation engineer of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States, discussed "It Would Pay to Advertise Safety."

Drastic Step Taken To Protect Guilder

Amsterdam, Netherlands, Sept. 16 (AP).—The Bank of the Netherlands today increased its discount rate from 5 per cent to 6 per cent.

The increase was due to the desire to protect gold stocks and check the outflow of gold which started during the week end.

It was understood the cabinet succeeded in drawing up plans to balance the 1936 budget by a series of new, drastic economies including salary cuts.

Authoritative quarters expected that Premier Hendry Colijn would announce that the cabinet intends to take all steps necessary to defend the present gold parity of the guilder.

Berle Declines Protest to SEC

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Sept. 16.—A. A. Berle, negotiator in the New York transit unification program declared today that he would not ask for an S. E. C. investigation of recent alleged rigging activities in traction securities, as the New York Stock Exchange has a probe already under way.

His announcement followed one made several days earlier that he intended asking the Securities and Exchange Commission to investigate the recent price rise in New York traction securities.

His statement had the immediate effect of driving prices down so that most or all of the recent gains were equalized. He was also censured by Wall Street for not apprising the New York Stock Exchange, of which he is governor, of the charges he intended making.

No Results.

No announcement has been made by the exchange as to the results of the inquiry.

Berle was a member of the original Roosevelt "Brain Trust" and had a hand in drafting the original securities and exchange act, designed primarily to prevent "stock rigging" and manipulation of prices to the detriment of investors.

As a result of his public announcement it was believed in well informed circles than any findings of the business conduct committee of the stock exchange will be made public to remove the stigma that is thought to have been cast over security trading.

October 1 Deadline.

October 1 has been set as the deadline when the City of New York must complete negotiations to insure a deal made with the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transfer Co.

At the present time a movement is under way by some of the B. H. T. bondholders to call off the deal, which provides for sale of the B. M. T. properties for a net price of $185,000,000. The bondholders assert that the company can refund its outstanding 6 per cent bonds into 5s and save a substantial sum in that manner.

Cotton Prices Off In Quiet Session

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 16.—Coton eased off in a comparatively narrow market today under Southern and scattered selling, which was absorbed by the trade. December sold down to 10.30 and closed at that figure, with the general market closing barely steady at net declines of 3 to 8 points.

Early buying here at the opening on relatively steady Liverpool cables was supplied by hedging and scattered local selling on reports of good weather in the South over the week-end.

Heavy Deficit Not Inflation, Says Economist

European Countries' Have Debts of Far Greater Magnitude.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Sept. 16.—Serious currency inflation as a result of the heavy Government deficits is unlikely in this country at present, according to Yoneo Arai, economist, in the Annalist. The author bases his conclusions on the experiences of European countries, especially France and the United Kingdom, in the matter of government deficits and indebtedness and their relation to the national income.

If one compares the magnitude of the French deficits, the increase in the debt and in the money supply during the period covered, according to Mr. Arai, it does not appear that there is anything in the situation in the United States that would lead one to expect the development of an inflationary base anywhere nearly comparable to that of France during 1913 to 1926.

A study of Great Britain's experience will give us a similar conclusion. Great Britain has today a much heavier burden of debt and taxes than the United States, and this burden was many times increased over that of 1913 without resulting in any great lasting inflation.

U. S. Increase Faster.

"While since 1913, the rate of increase in the ratio of public debt to national income in the United States has been greater than in the case of either Great Britain or France," Mr. Arai declared, "this is so only because prior to the war the tax burden in the United States was relatively much lower.

"In spite of this increase in ratio, however, in 1932 the United States was shouldering a public debt (which includes both Federal and local governments) that, in relation to national income, was slightly smaller than that of France at the beginning of the war both as to principal and interest.

"The percentage of taxes to income was about 25 per cent higher than for France in 1913, but, since this was due to an abnormally low income in the year 1932, it can probably be assumed that the burden of taxes and interest charges in the United States in that year was not materially greater than it was in France in 1913.

French Debts 8 Times.

"On the basis of the 1932 figures for the United States, the French experience would mean an increase of the government debt (Federal and local) from approximately $39,000,000,000 to $345,000,000,000, and of the money supply from about $38,000,000,000 to some $258,000,000,000.

It was predicted in President Roosevelt's recent budget message that the Federal debt would increase by 1936 to a little over 34,000,000,000. Since in Great Britain the interest on the public debt was 9.00 per cent and the taxes 25.7 per cent of her national income in 1932, theoretically it would seem that even on the basis of the very low 1932 income the public debt of the United States could be increased some $70,000,000,000 to $75,000,000,000 over the $19,500,000,000 outstanding in 1932 before the interest and tax burden would equal that borne by the people in England.

Even allowing for numerous errors in estimates and for differences in national characteristics and other conditions, it would still appear that the United States was a long way off, even on the basis of a $4,000,000,000 yearly deficit, from reaching the burden that England is bearing today, under which, in spite of its magnitude, prices show relatively little inflation over 1913.

Oliveri Leads Downtown Tourney

Rattling off 13 pars and two birdies, and going over par only on three holes, the chubby-faced Roosevelt High golf captain won the honors by a two-stroke margin, with Harold Bowers and W. W. Seay in the runner-up position.

Opens With Birdie.

Oliveri opened his round with a birdie 3, went out in 37 and came back in 36, even par. He took only 24 putts on the back nine, and had seven one-putt greens for the day.

Two rounds of match play are scheduled today, with the medalist facing Pat Axtell in his inaugural battle this morning. Bowers takes on P. A. Walton and Seay opposes Charlie Ficco.

The semifinals in three flights will be played Wednesday and the finals Thursday.

Boy, Dirty, Ousted; Washes, Returns

By the Associated Press.

Omaha, Nebr., Sept. 15.—Frank Knapple, coach of backfield aspirants at Central High School, has given a enw thrust to the character building often attributed to football mentors.

Demand for Navy Tickets Is Heavier

Applications Exceed Last Season's Record.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 16 (AP).—Football attendance at games this season should exceed last fall figures if the advance demand for tickets to Naval Academy gridiron clashes are any criterion.

Comparative figures of the ticket requests received by the Navy Athletic Association show that in all cases the number is running ahead of last season.

Navy opens with William and Mary College on September 28. Already 452 ticket applications have been received, compared to 353 at this time last year. Last fall 11,906 persons crowded Thompson Stadium for this game.

The dmeand for tickets to the Army-Navy game to be played on Franklin Field, Philadelphia, on November 30, shows a considerable increase. Already 1,416 applications are resting in the Navy files, compared to 489 at this date last season.

The service classic is nearly always a sellout, 80,000 spectators filling the stands last season when Navy defeated Army, 3 to 0.

Six Clubs Plan Series With Landis

All Teams Having Chance for Pennants Meet in Chicago Today.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Plans for the world series will be made here tomorrow.

With the Cubs throwing a terrific scare into the hearts of the Cardinals and Giants, representatives of all clubs still having a mathematical chance in the pennant races, will meet with Kenesaw Mountain Landis, baseball commissioner, to arrange details.

Invited to attend were officials of the Cubs, Giants, Cardinals and Pirates, of the National League, and the Detroit Tigers and New York Yankees, of the American League. William Harridge, president of the American League, and President Ford Frick of the National League also were invited to sit in at the conference.

Such questions as to how the world-series tickets will be sold, the ticket prices, the eligible players, and whether there again would be a commercial broadcast will be decided.

October 2 Tentative Date.

Commissioner Landis tonight would give no hint as to the opening date, but the general impression seemed to be that Wednesday, October 2, would be named. nUder the rules, the series will open in the city winning the National League championship, as the American League city had that honor last year, with the Tigers meeting the Cardinals in Detroit.

The series will be of seven games, with the world's title going to the club first to win four victories.

"It will be up to the interested clubs and the two league presidents to agree upon the opening date, also the schedule," Commissioner Landis said. "The prices of tickets, no doubt, will be the same as those prevailing last year."

Work Rushed on New Pulaski Show Field

Pulaski, Va., Sept. 16 (AP).—Pulaski is pushing work on a new stadium which has been financed largely with Government funds in order to have it ready for the horse show to be held there October 11 under the direction of the Pulaski Horse Show Association.

The association, of which Garland Cassell, of Wythe County, is president, secured a charter from the State Corporation Commission last week.

The stadium where the show is to be held will have a seating capacity of 2,500, it having been decided to erect bleachers as well os concrete stands.

Grid Prospects At Fordham Are Bright

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—As tough a bunch of football players as there is in the country—to beat, to spell, even to pronounce—is Jimmy Crowley's entry in the big league football ranks at Fordham this fall.

For two years now, Sleepy Jim, one of Notre Dame's immortals as a member of the great Four Horsemen backfield, has been struggling patiently to instill in his amazing collection of big Poles, Lithuanians, Italians and Irish the great niceties and delicacies of the Rockne system.

Now, for the first time, they look as if they're beginning to get it, and they're responding just in time to save not only Jim's famous good humor, but the Maroon's honor as well, facing a schedule that includes Boston College, Purdue, Vanderbilt, Pittsburgh and St. Mary's of California, among others.

Seven Regulars Lost.

Jim is piecing his team together, aided by a collection of giant sophomores, after losing seven regulars and a total of 11 letter-men from last fall by graduation. He has a fine working squad of about 40 big, powerful, fleet fellows and the only cut he has made, and probably will make, was Alex Wojciechowicz, who sheared down to Alex Wjoe for the very apparent reasons. Wjoe probably will be his first-string center, and his chief rival is Julius Miskinis.

Crowley's sophomores probably represent the greatest linguistical problem ever to face a Fordham coach, where tough names are legendary. In addition to Wojciechowicz, he greeted this year Chet Napiorski, Al Barbartsky, Ed Woitkowski. The redeeming feature is that they're all great prospects. By a strange coincidence, his brightest sophomore is a boy named Emil Dul.

Two Veteran Backs.

Two veteran backs are available in Capt. Joe Maniaci at one half and Joe Dulkie, full back. Woje is so good that last year's center, Nat Pierce, will play guard. Leo Paquin is a veteran end. He has two grand tackles in Amerino Sarno and Al Sabo, and there are plenty of husky candidates, swift and capable, for all positions.

The schedule:

September 28, Franklin and Marshall. October 5, Boston College; 12, Purdue; 19, Vanderbilt; 26, Lebanon Valley. November 2, Pittsburgh; 9, St. Mary's; 16, Muhlenberg; 28, New York University.

Silver Sickle Victor In Detroit's Feature

Detroit, Sept. 16 (AP).—Silver Sickle, owned by William Lebaron, of Hollywood, came up fast on the outside in the stretch to win the Highland Park purse, mile and one sixteenth feature race at the Fairgrounds today, by a nose.

Maple Hussy was second, with Zevson third, three quarters of a length father back as the result of a brilliant rush in the final sixteenth.

Attorneys for Plaintiff.

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE DISTRICT of Columbia, holding an Equity Court. Maryland Casualty Company, a Corporation (Baltimore, Maryland), Plaintiff, vs. C. F. Connor, J. O. Ripstra, Co-partners, trading as Connor and Ripstra (Wichita, Kansas), et al., Defendants. Equity No. 58129. Notice is hereby given, as follows: The court by decree filed in the above-entitled cause on February 19, 1935, appointed Warren E. Miller, receiver for all moneys then payable or thereafter to become payable from the United States under and by virtue of a certain contract between the United States, acting through its Interior Department, and the defendants C. F. Connor and J. O. Ripstra, trading as Connor and Ripstra, for the installation of a heating plant in the Veterans' Training School at Talequah, Oklahoma; and on July 15, 1935, the court ordered in said cause as follows: "ORDERED, that this cause be, and the same hereby is referred to the auditor of this court, for the purpose of ascertaining and reporting to the court to whom and in what amounts the moneys collected by the receiver herein are payable. Said auditor is hereby directed to hear and consider such testimony as may be adduced before him concerning the services rendered by Warren E. Miller in this cause, and to report his findings to the court for the purpose of aiding the court in fixing the amount of compensation to be paid to said Warren E. Miller." In pursuance of this order, I, the undersigned, have fixed and appointed MONDAY, THE 14TH DAY OF OCTOBER, 1935, AT 10:30 O'CLOCK, A. M., as the time and the Auditor's Hearing Room in the United States Court House, Washington, D. C., as the place for a hearing and the taking of testimony thereunder, at which time all persons and corporations having claims for labor and materials supplied for the installation of said heating plant in the Veterans' Training School at Telequah, Oklahoma, are hereby notified to appear and prove the same. A. LEFTWICH SINCLAIR, Auditor of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. 3.10.17

September PAY DAY SALE

USED CARS

At this time of the year no used car dealer is going to keep a car in his stock any longer than it requires for him to thoroughly re-condition it. It is getting all too close to the end of the year and the beginning of new models.

This means that you save and save substantially on a used car bought now. Especially with the added inducements, Washington's dependable dealers offer you in this sale.

OFFICE OF THE ARCHITECT OF THE Capitol, Washington, D. C., September 4, 1935.—Sealed bids, in triplicate, will be received in this office until 3 p. m., OCTOBER 4, 1935, and then publicly opened for replacing approximately 1,200 lineal feet of 36" cast-iron water main south of the Capitol Power Plant, Washington, D. C., with 37" outside diameter and 30" outside diameter steel water mains. Drawings and specifications may be obtained by qualified bidders without deposit on application to this office. DAVID LYNN, Architect of the Capitol. 17

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, PROCUREment Division, Public Works Branch, Washington, D. C., Sept. 13, 1935.—Sealed bids, in duplicate, will be publicly opened in this office at 10 a. m., SEPT. 30, 1935, for furnishing all labor and materials and performing all work for the refinishing of the cork tile floors in the U. S. Public Health Service Bldg., Washington, D. C. Specifications may be obtained from this office in the discretion of the Assistant Director of Procurement, Public Works Branch. W. E. REYNOLDS, Assistant Director of Procurement, Public Works Branch. 17,18,19

COMMISSIONERS, D. C., WASHINGTON, September 7, 1935. Sealed proposals will be received at Room 509, District Building, until 2 o'clock p. m., October 8, 1935, and then publicly opened, for construction, etc., of Main Building Superstructure, Adult Unit, at site of District of Columbia Tuberculosis Sanatoria, near Glenn Dale, Prince Georges County, Maryland. A more complete description of the work and full information for bidders is given in proposals, specifications, drawings and other contract papers which may be obtained at Room 427, District Building, upon deposit of a CERTIFIED CHECK payable to the Collector of Taxes, D. C., in the sum of $50 to insure return in good condition. Not more than 2 complete sets of drawings and specifications will be furnished any one general contractor. No proposal will be considered unless accompanied by a guaranty of not less than 5% of the amount of the bid, in the form of a certified check made payable to the Collector of Taxes, D. C., U. S. bonds, or the bond of an approved surety company. Security for the faithful performance of the work shall be in the form of a surety bond in a penal sum equal to the estimated total contract price, a labor bond in an amount equal to the largest estimated aggregate payroll for any one month in which it is required, Public Liability insurance in the sum of $5,000 and $10,000 is also required. The work called for by this proposal is to be performed in accordance with an agreement dated December 19, 1934, between the Commissioners of the District of Columbia and the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works and is subject to the provisions of Title II of the National Industrial Recovery Act and the rules and regulations prescribed by the President and the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works. The Director of Reemployment for the District of Columbia is Edgar B. Young, 480 Indiana Ave. N.W. The Commissioners reserve the right to reject any or all proposals and to waive informalities as they deem best for the interest of the District of Columbia. Final award of contract is subject to approval of the Federal Emergency Administrator of Public Works. All prospective bidders are hereby notified that any bid submitted in response to this advertisement must be accompanied by a statement of facts as to the financial, business and technical organization of the bidder available for the contemplated work, including financial resources. The Commissioners expressly reserve the right to reject any bid in which the facts as to the business and technical organization, financial resources or experience compared with the project bid proposed, or the hand to past known performance of the bidder justify such rejection. Attention is called to the fact that not less than the minimum wage rates prescribed by the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works must be paid on this project. 9.10.11.16.17.18

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — My, What Changes — By Harry J. Tuthill

Years? Oh yes, I forgot.... everything so mixed up. Anyhow, I want to see your mother right now and....
Children? Ah, let me see... think..?
My children, dad! Barko and I have two now. We had a nurse for them, but Barko was caught in the market crash of 1954, last year, and....
1955! Ah that's impossible. I, the Mogul of Mexico, refuse to believe....

McGuire Is Named Head of Bar Group

O. R. McGuire, counsel to Comptroller General McCarl, has been appointed chairman of the committee on administrative law of the American Bar Association. This committee will prepare and urge legislation next winter to create a general court of administrative law before which legal questions arising out of executive regulations can be heard.

This movement, which has the backing of the American Bar Association, received impetus from the vast number of discretionary laws enacted under the Roosevelt Administration, which have resulted in literally thousands of executive orders and departmental regulations all having the full force of act of Congress.

Associated with McGuire on the bar association committee will be Louis G. Caldwell, Washington lawyer and former chairman of this committee; Dr. Felix Frankfurter and a number of other nationally known legal experts. McGuire is the first lawyer in government service to head such a bar association committee and was selected because of his intimate knowledge of adminstrative law gained as counsel in the comptroller general's office.
